SUPREME COUNCIL WILL NOT REVI[illegible] LIST OF GERMAN WAR CRIMINA[illegible]

ORIGINAL LIST OF EIGHT HUNDRED WILL STAND: OFFICIALLY STATED

PARIS, Jan. 31—The list of Germans, guilty of war crimes, to stand trial before Allied tribunals will not be revised it was stated officially today. The list containing more than 800 names will be handed to Germany, February 10. The Council will decide on the manner of remitting the note to Germany. Recently a Berlin dispatch reported the German government had dispatched a note to the Allies in Paris asking a modification in enforcement of the clause in the Versailles treaty demanding that Germany surrender the persons accused of war crimes. The German government, it was stated, feared that the surrender of the accused might percipitate internal troubles in the republic.

ANOTHER BRITISH EDITOR SCATHINGLY DENOUNCES AMERICA

LONDON, Jan. 31—"Europe is not going to submit to financial domination by the United States any more than she submitted to Prussian military domination," Ralph Blumenfeld, editor of the London Express declared in an interview today. "The letter of Secretary Glass to Homer Ferguson, President of the United Stases Chamber of Commerce in which he declared that America could go no further in financial assistance to Europe shows America in the position of a rich man turning his poor relations from door." The editor defended his scathing editorial on the international financial situation "as all that was necessary to bring the situation to a head."

"There is a group revolting in Europe against the exchange situation," Blumenfeld declared. He declared he will start a campaign through his newspaper to urge Great Britain to cease buying from the United States until the exchanges were more favorable. The editorial urged an international financial conference where a plan could be worked out to stabilize the present conditions. "The present situation," Blumenfeld said, "means ruin for Europe, ruin for America afterwards and eventually ruin for civilization. If it was your duty to make the world safe for democracy," he continued, "how much more is it your duty to save the world from ruin. The people will revolt against the present situation. Europe is determined not to remain in financial bondage to the United States forever."

Unless conditions are righted soon, the editor predicted, there will be financial clashes in Europe which will spread to America. Therefore it behooves the United States to cooperate with us in view of her own interests.

INCOME TAX MEN FINISH PLANNING FOR THEIR TASK

The Deputy Internal Revenue Collectors for the section of the Western Pennsylvania District presided over by M. I. Gardner, of Clearfield, General Deputy, this morning concluded their round table conference which had been in session in The Dimeling Parlors since Thursday evening last.

This conference was called for discussion and mapping out plans for the collection of the 1919 income tax. Those participating were: M. I. Gardner, of Clearfield; Charles Laughlin, New Bethlehem; E. F. Reilley, Johnstown; L. F. Saniel, Latrobe; M. L. McKean and H. J. Cartmell, Bradford, R. C. Bundy, DuBois; J. W. Keppler, Osceola Mills; G. B. Straub, St. Marys.

It was expected that the collectors would be able to begin their work imediately following this meeting but on account of failure to receive necessary supplies the start was delayed for the present.

The revenue men are a clean cut bunch of young business men and will make the process of extracting the government's share of your last year's excess profits as painless as possible.

These "revenue men" are not directly charged with the enforcement of the "dry law" and might even be invited to sample your private stock with perfect safety while figuring up your income, and while we don't know how far they would go along that line naturally expect that a fellow in this position ought to be in position to list the ten "best cellars" in his district at the end of the fiscal year.

OLD COURT HOUSE RECORD TELLS OF A "REAL WINTER"

We have heard a great deal of complaint from "kickers" regarding the alleged severity of the present winter since winter really started about the middle of December last. The regular or generally pessimistic weather shark takes delight in comparing the present and recently past gentle zero zephyrs with "one of those old time winters."

In order that these fault-finders may realize just what a "real old-time winter" was like we publish the following "weather note" taken from an old minute book in the office of the County Commissinoers.

At the time mentioned John W. Howe ,the Morrisdale merchant, was Commissioner's clerk and we found the following entry in the old book in Mr. Howe's handwriting and signed by him:

Now, February 2nd, 1881, at 6 o'clock a. m. the thermometer at G. L. Reed's (present High school site) registered 36 degrees below zero. At 10 o'clock a. m. the sun is shining bright and thermometer indicates 2[illegible] degrees below zero. The ground-hog saw his shadow at 8 a. m.

February 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th the thermometer ranged every morning from 12 to 36 below and on Sunday morning, February 6th it registered 26 below. There is three feet of snow in the woods."

We admit that even we have sometimes doubted the weather tales told by some of these old fellows about what happened long ago but when you get a fellow down in black and white in a public record even though that record is forty years old you simply have to accept the written record. That was sure "some winter."

DEMPSEY AGAIN ASSAILED

CHICAGO, Jan. 31—Hyde Parke Post No. 34 today made public objections to the "vindication of heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey by the Milwuakee Post of the American Legion. "Milwaukee also vindicated Victor Berger," comander F. B. Flannery said. "Vindication seems to be one of the best things they do out there." Dempsey's appointment to honorary membership in the Milwaukee Post was illegal, according to Flanery. The Legion does not appoint anyone to honorary membership.

MISS YORKE IS PRAISED BY THE PRESS

Mr. Provenia Also Comes In For Generouse Praise Every Place He Has Appeared

WILL APPEAR HERE FEB. 9

The work of Miss Helen Yorke and Wadsworth Provandia, who will appear in concert at the High School auditorium on February 9th under the auspices of the Woman's Club has been highly praised in other cities, where they have sung, as is shown by the several newspaper clippings which follow:

The Springfield Daily Republican says of Mr. Provendie—"The chief work of the evening devolved upon Mr. Provandie, a baritone, who had not been here before and who delighted his hearers with a remarkable interpretation of his extremely difficult and trying part, technically. Some of the quaintly florid passages by which the composer has expressed the medieval form of the theme must severely tax a singer's powers but Mr. Provandia sang with ease and security and brought out to the full the artificial yet genuine emotion with which the work is surcharged."

The Boston Post says, "Wadsworth Provandia baritone, is a singer of undoubted talent; he grasped the often subtle mood of his music and sang with youth and impulse as though he too were yaphsodist of the fourteenth century."

Mr. Provandia is termed "King of Baritones" by Jean de Raszke, under whom he studied in Paris.

The Elmira Star Gazette says of Miss Yorke who appeared in the Lyceum theatre of that city with the De Feo Grand Opera Company in the opera "Lucia Di Lamermoor."

"Miss Yorke is a real find in the musical world. She is only 22 years old, of dainty figure and attractive. Her portrayal of the mad scene was most realistic and not overdrawn. Miss Yorke sang two seasons in opera in Italy after she arrived there in 1914. She sings the 'Barber of Saville,' 'Rigoletto,' and 'Lucia,' but personally she regards 'La Traviatte' as being too heavy for her as yet. Miss Yorke's mother accompanies her on her travels."

When Miss Yorke appeared with the De Feo Opera company, in the same opera in the Fulton opera house at Lancaster, the Lancaster Examiner said this of her work: "Helen Yorke, who appeared in the title role, had a superb voice, clear as a bell, and of a volume that filled every corner of the house. It was a marvel, looking at her slight physique, how she could have such a wonderful voice. Her acting alone would have charmed the audience without her voice, and she could win as high a place as an actress as a singer. The audience warmed to her from her first appearance on the stage and she was rapturously applauded at the conclusions of every appearance."

TODAY'S REPORTS SHOW FLU ON INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—The influenza epidemic today continued to increase according to reports to the United States Public Health service. Officials who have studied the situation are far from alarmed.

New York state, exclusive of New York City, has 1,338 cases in the last 24 hours with 89 cases of pneumonia.

Massachusetts reported 955 cases of influenza of which 318 were in Boston.

Missouri figures report 542 in St. Louis and 54 in St. Joseph.

The disease is reported breaking out in the winter resorts. 21 cases were reported at Palm Beach.

TREATY FIGHT WILL BE SENT TO SENATE

Bi-Partisan Conference Ends With Failure Of Leaders To Make Any Progress

WILL GO ON FLOOR FEB. 10

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Formal notice was given in the Senate today that on Tuesday, February 10, Senator Hitchcock will move to take up the German treaty in open session. Senator Walsh from Montana, gave the notice five minutes after the Senate met. He urged Lodge to put into the record a statement he made yesterday following the collapse of the bi-partisan treaty conference. Lodge offered a statement by Hitchcock and asked that the two statements be printed in the Senate document which will make it available for general distribution throughout the country.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — The treaty controversy is now going back to the Senate as a whole as the result of the collapse of the bi-partisan conference compromise efforts. Senator Walsh from Montana will give the word today for a formal calling of the treaty in the open Senate by announcing that on Tuesday, February 10, Senator Hitchcock will formally move "that the Senate now proceed to consider the treaty with Germany." Walsh's notice will set in motion a chain of events preliminary to the Hitchcock move.

Between now and February 10, a number of questions must be decided upon. They include, first, will the Democrats support Hitchcock practically as a unit when he makes his move or will they desert his leadership in sufficient numbers to prevent resumption of the final debate? Second, will the Republican mild reservationists compromise with the Democrats in sufficient number to make Hitchcock's move successful? Third, how will the "irrevocable" Republicans vote? Fourth, will Senator Lodge maintain his opposition to call up the treaty or will he surrender his vote in the face of the country's demand for immediate ratification?

The answer to some of the questions depends upon the conferences to be held between now and February 10. As the thing now stands Senator Hitchcock believes that 43 or 44 of the 46 Democrats will support the move. Some of them, however, have expressed their strong opposition to it on the grounds that to get the treaty into the Senate again might block other legislation on which there is a great deal of attention demanded.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—All parley between Republicans and Democrats in the senate intended to bring about a compromise on the peace treaty reservations came to a decisive and definite end today.

The bi-partisan conference, which has been sitting in Senator Lodge's office broke up in disagreement and will never be convened again.

The disagreement came after Senator Lodge, on behalf of the Republicans, had stated his most positive refusal to yield to any compromise on the reservations on Article Ten and the Monroe Doctrine.

Senator Hitchcock thereupon announced that his next stop will be to move in the Senate on February 10 to bring up the treaty for discussion on the floor. The senator believes his motion will be supported by at least 43 Democrats and by enough Republicans to make a majority, thereby throwing the entire treaty question again open to debate in the senate.

Before leaving tonight on a flying trip to Nebraska Senator Hitchcock stated that Senator Walsh, of Montana will give notice in the senate tomorrow of the motion, which Senator Hitchcock will make on his return.

Just before the conference broke up, the Democrats made their final stand for a change in the Lodge resolution on Article 10. Having failed to get their own proposal accepted, they threw into the hopper the draft of a reservation prepared by former President Taft.

In thrusting the Taft reservation into the arena of discussion, the Democrats thought they had made a clever political move, in that it forced the Republicans to reject a draft written by their former leader. But Senator Lodge, without the quiver of a smile, announced that the reservation could not be accepted. The Democrats at once anounced that the limit of negotiations had been reached and that further conference was unnecessary.

NOTED ENTERTAINER WILL LECTURE HERE NEXT THURSDAY EVE

The third number of the High School lecture course will be presented Thursday evening, February 5th when Lou J. Beauchamp will present his original philosophy and humor.

Mr. Beauchamp has lived a peculiar life. Losing his mother when a babe, he spent the early years of his life among the Creek, Choctaw and Cherokee Indians and uses many of the customs of the tribes as illustrations in his lectures. Denied school and college privileges, he was taught his letters by a young girl, at once became an omnivorous reader, and at the age of fourteen was contributing prose and poetry to New York papers, and at twenty was one of the editors of a noted Cincinnati daily newspaper.

He has traveled one million miles in the old world and the new, investigating the lives of the underworld in the slums and dens of the world's greatest cities, writing his experiences for the press. Because of these unique experiences he brings to the platform gifts that have been given to few others, and his love and sympathy for humanity enable him to use these experiences in his lectures in a way to benefit and please his hearers.

He has written books that have been translated into foreign tongues, and of which many editions have been sold, and his poems of child-life are found in many collections of poetry, the repertoire of readers, and in scrap-books all over the land.

It is doubtful if any man on the platform causes as much laughter in an evening as does Mr. Beauchamp, yet all the time he is teaching truths that send his auditors out into the world better men and women, determined to do more than ever before to bring sunshine and song into the lives of those with whom they come in contact.

As a Chautauqua lecturer Mr. Beauchamp stands at the top and has never been able to answer all the calls made by Chautauqua managers. At some of them he has lectured two and three times annually for the past six years.

When a tender influence stole into the heart of Lou Beaucheamp and turned his footsteps into the paths of light, a myriad of messages of mirth and happiness were born in his mind—messages which glowed with the awakened love of humanity in his own soul and scintillated with the sunshine of a newly-inspired genius. Beauchamp is a verbal cyclone, with a laugh and a cry in every minute. He is a minister of the Gospel of Sunshine and thousands of listeners have first seen the light through his ministrations. He is the most beloved of all the lyceum sojourners, because he has been his own best disciple in the Gospel of Love.

H.&C. OPERATORS REFUSED TO GO TO WORK

Assert Dollar A Day Wage Is Insufficient For Work the Company Requires Of Them

PARTIAL SERVICE RENDERED

Mrs. Bimpkins could not hold her regular morning telephone chat with Mrs. Blimkins this morning, neither could any of aforesaid ladies call the grocery and request immediate delivery of a spool of thread. In fact the ordinary procedure of living was considerably side tracked when the telephone girls at the local H. & C. exchange came out on strike. The girls, nine in number, called at The Progress office shortly after eight o'clock to tell their story. The spokeswoman said they felt called upon to do that because of threats which had been made to call the maledictions of the public down upon them by publishing their names and telling how ungrateful they were. The spokeswoman for the strikers said the telephone company is paying them only 12c an hour but for the purpose of making bookkeeping and accounting more easy made the daily stipend $1.00 per day.

The principal demand of the striking operators is for an increase in pay and they allege that when they interviewed the manager this morning and presented demands for 19c per hour that he ran them out of the office and threatened to have them black listed at all of the other places of employment throughout the town.

Ordinarily the matter of wages should not concern anybody except the employer and employe, but, in the case of a public service corporation such as a telephone company is, the public has a right to expect that a wage will be paid which will bring about satisfactory working conditions and an increase in the efficiency of the service that will be given by labor well paid. There is a well established axiom that we get just what we pay for and with the telephone service generally in Clearfield we are certainly getting 12c an hour service.

Whether or not the small pay of the operators, 12c an hour, is responsible for the inefficient service we have received it not determined but it is a cinch that that is about all it has been worth. From an economic standpoint these operators are entitled to more money but from the standpoint of efficiency in the light of past service it is doubtful whether an increase is merited. Poor telephone service is worse than none at all and out of this dispute we hope there will come a higher standard of service. It is not likely, however, that a higher standard of service can have as its foundation a 12c an hour wage.

BLOODY IMPRINT OF HAND GIVES CLUE TO SNOW BANK CRIME

CLEVELAND, Jan. 31—A bloody hand mark on a telephone pole and a battered derby were clews which the police today believed would lead to the solution of the mysterious death of two men found here yesterday. One of the victims was identified as Salvadore P. Russo, of New York. The other is still unknown. Revenge was believed to have been the motive. Search was being made today for a man said to be the leader in the Italian colony in Buffalo. Police here believe he can clear up the mystery.

Local Boys Put Up Classy Exhibition And Triumph Over Brookville Five

GOING TO WIN RIGHT ALONG

'Ray team! We're out of the [illegible]

We had to let off a little [illegible] steam before we could settle down enough to tell you just how it happened. Maybe it isn't any great feat to defeat the only other team in the League that hasn't won a game (and hasn't yet) but even so last night's victory has given C. H. S. a lot of encouragement. Besides, the fact that Brookville was tied with Clearfield for last place doesn't say that the visitors couldn't play basket ball. They played a good game but only left thirteen points in the deck because of the superior shooting of the locals.

When the Red and Black [illegible] piling up scores at an [illegible] rate during the first half [illegible] though Brookville would [illegible] to the starting [illegible] away to a fine [illegible] tip-off [illegible] [illegible] of basket [illegible] ed at a loss as to where to [illegible] ball when they needed it, but they got it they used it to good advantage. Like the Peace Treaty, [illegible] that advantage had several [illegible] tions. As long as they played a [illegible] ing game, the visitors were a [illegible] for C. H. S., but when it came to shooting they fell far behind. In the first half they caged but one [illegible] goal.

Starting the second half with a rush, Brookville soon drew up on Clearfield and for a time were but a few points in the rear. For several minutes they kept within winning distance of Clearfield's score but C. H. S. continued at their same [illegible] pace and when Brookville's spurt grew weak the locals again drew away from them and carried their score to 44 points leaving Brookville with 31.

Clearfield showed a [illegible] improvement in their team work last night but still did not play the game they are capable of staging. Their shot fouls with a clock-like regularity until a fall in the second half disarranged his "works," and his floor work, coupled with that of Kephart, accounted for the small number of baskets caged by Brookville's forwards.

As we said before, it may not make a very great impression to say that we won from the team in the last place, but we have a short-[illegible] of chance for improvement.

Just watch our dust! w[illegible]

OUR TWO PRICES LOOK PRETTY GOOD TILL YOU SEE THE WAGES

More than 1,600 years ago imperial Rome tried to halt rampant profiteering by decreeing death to all who charged above a fixed scale of prices.

Reduced to our measures, butter was to cost not more than five cents a pound and eggs not more than five cents a dozen. Two pounds of beef or mutton were to be not more than five cents; five best cucumbers or one large melon, one cent; five heads of the best lettuce, two cents; fifty stalks of fresh asparagus, five cents; a good chicken, twenty-four cents, or a duck, sixteen cents; the best sea fish, ten cents each.

The limit for the best Falernian wine was sixteen cents a quart. Patrician ladies shoes were to sell for not more than sixty cents a pair and the most fashionable cloak bag (not beaded) might cost up to six dollars. The limit for 100 roses was three cents.

The glamour of these prices vanishes when you reach the wage scale. A common bricklayer could not get more than one cent wages a day; a driver of a camel, ass or mule, eight cents; a farm worker, ten cents; a stone mason, twenty cents; a shipwright or marble worker, twenty-four cents; a wall painter, twenty-eight cents, or a figure painter, sixty cents.

The pedagogue might charge twenty cents a month for each pupil, but a barber could not take more than one cent for a hair-trim.

The limit of the lawyer's fee for an applicatoin to the court was one dollar, but if he had to sit through the trial of a case he might charge four dollars.

Alas, Diocletian's price fixing didn't work. According to the historian Lactantius, the dealers in non-perishable commodities refused to sell, famines arose, breeding brawls and bloodshed and the imperial edict soon became a dead letter.—(Selected)

SINN FEIN HAS PLAN TO KILL HOME RULE PROGRAM

By WEBB MILLER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

DUBLIN (By Mail)— "Without shedding a drop of blood, we can ridicule Lloyd George's little home rule scheme and make a laughing stock of the government."

Thus one of the Sinn Fein leaders mentioned questions as to what the Sinn Feiners intend to do in case the government goes ahead with the enforcement of the new home rule plan.

Although firmly convinced that the government will never attempt to enforce the scheme, the Sinn Feiners are quietly mapping out a course of action to upset the government's plans. As tentatively decided upon the Sinn Feiners have evolved an ingenious scheme to twist the government's home rule plan into a "weapon of offense."

The course of action now under discussion is as follows:

The Sinn Feiners would order their followers to participate in good faith in the elections for the parliament which is to be created for the South of Ireland under the premier's bill. And it is practically certain that the Sinn Feiners would sweep the elections in the South and dominate the parliament.

Then at the first session of the parliament and as the first act of the parliament, the Sinn Feiners would give the home rule scheme a dramatic "coup de grace" be declaring Ireland a republic and proclaiming its severence from England. The leaders are certain that such a "Declaration of Independence" would be passed by an overwhelming majority in the parliament.

Thereafter the Parliament would be continued as the "Dail Eireann" or Assembly of Irish Republic. Inasmuch as the original "Dail Eireann" has been suppressed by the government as illegal, Sinn Fein would thus jockey the government into the unpleasant position of having themselves recreated the "Dail."

So the Sinn Feiners are chuckling in their sleeves and waiting for the government's next move.

"The Lloyd George scheme is not home rule and we won't have it," said the Sinn Fein leader. "By our scheme we will accomplish several things besides getting rid of the home rule bill. We will make the British government a laughing stock before the world, and let it prove to the world by its own actions that Ireland—or at least the majority of it—demands self-determination and independence. What could do that better than to have the first parliament set up by the government itself declare for independence as its first official act. And that's what it will do if they attempt to enforce this so-called home rule bill."

"DOC" LONG STRONG FOR CLEARFIELD NOW

K. A. Long, of Williamsport, the veteran trainman of the N. Y. C. passenger train is spending the week end with friends here. "Doc" has been braking the passenger train in and out of Clearfield ever since the Beech Creek R. R. twisted its way into this region but he never saw Clearfield above the Second street bridge until one day last summer he took a day off and came up town and evidently saw something that pleased him for every so often he stops on and lets the old train take care of itself for a few days.

The Royal Society Club met at the home of Margaret Lynch last evening. Cards and dancing furnished the entertainment. Delicious refreshments were served.

SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless, rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly Flandrau and his chum, Mac, both practically mere boys, become involved in a horse-stealing adventure. Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Saguache, Ariz., the band separates. Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to lynch Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's undoing. Flandrau learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son Sam, who has quarreled with his father. Cullison goes bail for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescues Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flandrau and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flandrau sees some move is being planned and becomes convinced it is train robbery. Sam leaves the ranch to go to Saguache. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his lieutenant, Lute Blackwell, arrange to hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the scene. Stone thus glutting his revenge on the ex-sheriff through his son's death and disgrace. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison's. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confidant of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

Part II.

CHAPTER I.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a sheepman, Cass Fendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.—Saguache is electrified by the news of the holdup of express messengers, the bandits securing $20,000. Cullison pays his poker debts, and shortly afterward Mackenzie and Alex Flandrau, his closest friends, learn he is suspected of the express robbery, his hat having been found on the scene and he being missing.

CHAPTER III.—Kate goes to Saguache for a consultation with Mackenzie, Alex Flandrau and Curly. All are convinced of Luck's innocence. The sheriff reveals that besides the finding of Cullison's hat, and his payment of his debts, Cass Fendrick had seen the robber and is almost certain it was Luck. Cullison is about to enter a homestead claim which will practically put Fendrick out of business.

CHAPTER IV.—Katy's shrewdness reveals how Cullison had taken Fendrick's hat when he left the Roundup club, and suspicion points strongly to a frameup on Fendrick's part and to his being responsible for Luck's disappearance. The sheriff receives a series of notes turning at the "Jack of Hearts." Curly finds a cigar store by that name and secures evidence that the proprietress, Mrs. Wylie, knows what happened to Luck.

CHAPTER V.—In the cellar of the cigar store Flandrau finds a cipher message left by Cullison, and follows the scent. Luck is held prisoner by Fendrick and Blackwell in a sheep herder's cabin in the mountains. Fendrick wants him to sign a relinquishment of his homestead rights, conditional to his release.

CHAPTER VI.—Uneasy over the possible results of his kidnaping of the cattleman, Fendrick tells Kate Cullison enough of the story to induce her to accompany him to her father. Cullison, fearing for his daughter's safety should she be left at the mercy of Blackwell, signs the relinquishment and accompanies Kate home.

CHAPTER VII.—Bucky O'Connor, of the Texas Rangers, lifelong friend of Cullison, takes a hand in the game, he and Curly making a search for the missing man. O'Connor arrests Fendrick, charging him with the abduction. Cullison seeks Fendrick with the object of punishing the sheepman personally, but O'Connor forbids, holding Fendrick under arrest.

CHAPTER VIII.—O'Connor apprehends Blackwell on his way to Soapy Stone's ranch and brings him to Saguache. Blackwell admits the express robbery, claiming Fendrick took the money from him. He also explains the circumstances of Cullison's abduction.

CHAPTER IX.—Blackwell escapes from prison and joins Soapy Stone. Sam Cullison receives notice from Stone of the approaching train holdup. Curly and Mackenzie drug the boy's coffee, and Curly, in Sam's clothes, takes his place on the train. The robbery takes place according to schedule, and Stone believes Sam to have been killed. Curly overcomes Stone's man, left with the horses, and gets away with them. He meets Luck Cullison and the posse. They intercept Stone, Blackwell and "Bad Bill" Cranston. Blackwell surrenders, but escapes. Stone and Cranston are killed.

CHAPTER X.—Back at Saguache, Luck Cullison and his son are reconciled, while Curly and Kate disclose their mutual love.

CHAPTER XI.—Kate Cullison, while riding on the range, disappears. Suspecting she has been abducted, a searching party is formed, Fendrick joining it.

CHAPTER XII.

A Good Samaritan.

Fendrick had guessed the exact truth. After leaving him Kate had ridden forward to the canon and entered it. She did not mean to go much farther, but she took her time. More than once she slipped from under a fold of her waist a letter and re-read sentences of it. Whenever she did this her eyes smiled. For it was a love letter from Curly, the first she had ever had. It had been lying on the inner edge of the threshold of her bedroom door that morning when she got up, and she knew that her lover had risen early to put it there unnoticed.

Faintly there came to her a wind-swept sound. She pulled up and waited, but no repetition of it reached her ears. But before her pony had moved a dozen steps she stopped him again. This time she was almost sure of a far cry, and after it the bark of a revolver.

With the touch of a rein she guided her horse toward the sound. It might mean nothing. On the other hand it might be a call for help. Her shout brought an answer which guided her to the edge of a prospect hole. In the darkness she made out an indistinct figure.

"Water," a husky voice demanded.

She got her canteen from the saddle and dropped it to him. The man glued his lips to the mouth as if he could never get enough.

"For God's sake get me out of here," he pleaded piteously.

"How long have you been there?"

"Two days. I fell in at night whilst I was cutting across country."

Kate fastened her rope to the horn of the saddle, tightened the cinch carefully, and dropped the other end to him. She swung to the back of the horse and braced herself by resting her full weight on the farther stirrup.

"Now," she told him.

The imprisoned man was dragged over the edge with one cheek scratched and bleeding.

"Might a-known you'd hurt me if you moved so fast," he complained, nursing his wounded face in such a way as to hide it.

"I'm sorry. I did my best to go carefully," the girl answered, stepping forward.

His hand shot forward and caught her wrist. Her startled eyes flashed to his face. The man was the convict Blackwell.

"Got anything to eat with you. I'm starving," he snapped.

"Yes. I shot some quail. Let go my hand."

He laughed evilly, without mirth. "Don't try any of your sassy ways on me. I'm a wolf on the howl."

She fought and twisted till she was worn out in her efforts to free herself. Panting, she faced him.

"Let me go, I tell you."

For answer his open hand struck her mouth. "Not till you learn your boss. Before I'm through with you a squaw won't be half so tame as you."

He dragged her to the horse, took from its case the rifle that hung by the saddle, and flung her from him roughly. Then he pulled himself to the saddle.

"March ahead of me," he ordered.

As soon as they had reached the bed of the canon he called a halt and bade her light a fire and cook him the quail. She gathered ironwood and cat-claw while he watched her vigilantly. Together they roasted the birds by holding them over the fire with sharpened sticks thrust through the wings. He devoured them with the voracity of a wild beast.

Hitherto his mind had been busy with the immediate present, but now his furtive shifting gaze rested on her more thoughtfully. He dared not leave her in the prospect hole. He was not yet ready to do murder, for fear of punishment. That was a possibility to be considered only if he should be hard pressed. The only alternative left him was to take her to the border as a companion of his fugitive doublings.

"We'll be going now," he announced, after he had eaten.

"Going where? Don't you see I'll be a drag to you? Take my horse and go. You'll get along faster."

"Do you think so?"

For the first time it came to her that if he did not take her with him he would kill her to insure his own safety. None of the arguments that would have availed with another man were of any weight here. Her sex, her youth, the service she had done him—these would not count a straw. He was lost to all the instincts of honor that govern even hard desperate men of his class.

They struck into the mountains, following a cattle trail that wound upward with devious twists. The man rode, and the girl walked in front with the elastic lightness, the unconscious flexuous grace of poise given her body by an outdoor life. By dusk they were up in the headwaters of the creeks. The resilient muscles of the girl had lost their spring. She moved wearily, her feet dragging heavily so that sometimes she staggered when the ground was rough. Not once had the man offered her the horse. He meant to be fresh, ready for any emergency that might come. Moreover, it pleased his small soul to see the daughter of Luck Cullison fagged and exhausted but still answering the spur of his urge.

The moon was up before they came upon a tent shining in the cold silvery light. Beside it was a sheetiron stove, a box, the ashes of a camp fire, and a side of bacon hanging from the limb

ASTHMA WOULDN'T LET HIM LIE DOWN

Hasn't had a sign of trouble now for over 9 months.

"A year ago I had asthma so bad my friends thought I wouldn't get over it. I had doctored for a long time without result. I had not been in bed for 3 weeks, could not even lie straight in a chair. [illegible] Milks Emulsion and [illegible] was only two days later that I could go to bed and sleep soundly. After taking eight bottles [illegible] myself completely cured. It is over 9 months now since I quit taking Milks Emulsion and I haven't had a symptom of asthma since." [illegible]

Why shouldn't Milks Emulsion help you? It has worked wonders for others. It costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom disease has weakened and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved, usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.

of a stunted pine. Cautiously they stole forward.

[illegible] No doubt its owner, a Mexican sheep herder in the employ of Fendrick and Dominguez, was out somewhere with his flock.

Kate cooked [illegible] and the convict ate. The girl was too tired and anxious to eat, but he made her [illegible] a little. [illegible] the saddlebags [illegible] beans, coffee and flour. [illegible] Blackwell [illegible] once more the two [illegible].

They [illegible] camp in a pocket open [illegible] half [illegible] up on the hill. [illegible] he fastened her [illegible] and tied the other [illegible] to the [illegible] trunk of a fallen tree. To make sure of her he lay on the rope, both hands clenched to the [illegible]. In five minutes he was asleep. But it was long before Kate could escape from wakefulness. At last she fell into troubled dreams.

From one of these she awoke to see that the [illegible] light was sifting through the [illegible]. She was shivering with the chill of an Arizona mountain night. Turning her body the girl's eyes fell upon her captor. He was looking at her in the way that no decent man looked at a woman. Her impulse was to scream, to struggle to her feet and run. What did he mean? What was he going to do?

But something warned her this would precipitate the danger. She called upon her courage and tried to still the fearful tumult in her heart. Somehow she succeeded. A scornful, confident pride flashed from her eyes into his. It told him that for his life he dared not lay a finger upon her in the way of harm. And he knew it was true, knew that if he gave way to his desire no hole under heaven would be deep enough to hide him from the vengeance of her friends.

He got sullenly to his feet. "Come. We'll be going."

Within the hour they saw some of his hunters. A wisp of smoke rose from the basin below. Grouped about it were three men eating breakfast.

"Don't make a sound," warned Blackwell.

He rifle covered her. With all her soul she longed to cry for help. But she dared not take the risk. Even as the two on the edge of the bowl watched, [illegible] one of the campers [illegible] and sauntered to a little grove where the ponies were tethered. The [illegible] was too far to make sure, but [illegible] in the [illegible] made the girl [illegible] that the man was Curly. Her [illegible] went out to him in a [illegible] of appeal.

She [illegible] right. It was Curly. He was thinking of her at that moment [illegible] but no bell of warning told her that he was wondering whether he would have a better chance if he sacrificed her life.

From gulch to arroyo, from rock cover to pineclad hillside he was driven in his attempts to break the narrowing circle of grim hunters that hemmed him. And with each failure, with every passing hour, the terror in him mounted. He would have welcomed life imprisonment, would have sold the last vestige of manhood to save the worthless life that would soon be snuffed out unless he could evade his hunters till night and in the darkness break through the line.

He knew now that it had been a fatal mistake to bring the girl with him. He might have evaded Bolt's posses, but now every man within fifty miles was on the lookout for him. His rage turned against Kate because of it. Yet even in those black outbursts he felt that he must cling to her as his only hope of saving himself. He had made another mistake in lighting a camp fire during the morning. Any fool ought to have known that the smoke would draw his hunters as the smell of carrion does a buzzard.

Now he made a third error. Doubling back over an open stretch of hillside he was seen again and forced into the first pocket that opened. It proved to be a blind gulch, one offering no exit at the upper end but a stiff rock climb to a bluff above.

He whipped off his coat and gave it to Kate.

"Put it on. Quick!"

Surprised, she slipped it on.

"Now ride back out and cut along the edge of the hill. You've got time to make it all right before they close in if you travel fast. Stop once, just once, and I'll drop you in your tracks. Now git!"

She saw his object in a flash. Wearing his gray felt hat and his coat, the pursuers would mistake her for him. They would follow her, perhaps shoot her down. Anyhow it would be a diversion to draw them from him. Meanwhile he would climb the cliff and slip away unnoticed.

The danger of what she had to do stood out quite clearly, but as a chance to get away from him he welcomed it gladly. From the lip of the gulch she swung abruptly to the right. Her horse stumbled and went down just as a bullet flew over her head. Before she was free of the stirrups strong hands pinned her shoulders to the ground. She heard a glad, startled cry. The rough hands became immediately gentle. Then things grew black. The last she remembered was that the mountains were dancing up and down in an odd fashion.

Her eyes opened to see Curly. She was in his arms and his face was broken with emotion of love and tenderness.

"You're not hurt?" he implored.

"No."

"[illegible] did [illegible] me treat you [illegible]" His voice was trembling [illegible] he whispered it.

"No, no."

And at that she broke down. A deep sob shook her body and mother. She buried her head on his shoulder and wept.

Without losing an instant the convict set himself at the climb. His [illegible] the swift glances shot behind him, the appalling dread that made his nerves [illegible] delayed his speed by [illegible] the singleness of his energy. His face and hands were torn with [illegible] his knee bruised by a slip against a sharp jut of quartz.

When he reached the top he was panting and shaken. Before he had moved a dozen steps a man came out of the brush [illegible] and called to him to surrender. He flung his rifle to place and fired twice.

The man staggered and steadied himself. A [illegible] had [illegible] and Blackwell could not throw it out. He turned to run as the other fired. But he was too late. He stumbled, tripped and went down full length.

The man that had shot him waited for him to rise. The convict did not move. Cautiously the wounded hunter came forward, his eyes never lifting from the inert sprawling figure. Even now he half expected him to spring up, life and energy in every tense muscle. Not till he stood over him did he saw the carelessly flung limbs, the uncouth twist to the neck, could he believe that so slight a crook of the finger had sent swift death across the plateau.

The wounded man felt suddenly sick. Leaning against a rock he steadied himself till the nausea was past. Voices called to him from the place below. He answered and presently circled down into the gulch which led to the open.

At the gulch mouth he came on a little group of people. One glance told him all he needed to know. Kate Cullison was crying in the arms of Curly Flandrau. Simultaneously a man galloped up, flung himself from his horse and took the young woman from her lover.

"My little girl!" he cried in a voice that rang with love.

Luck had found his ewe lamb that was lost.

It was Curly who first saw the man approaching from the gulch. "Hello, Cass! Did you get him?"

Fendrick nodded wearily. "Yes. He's up there." The sheepman's hand swept toward the bluff.

"You're wounded?"

"Got me in the shoulder. Nothing serious, I judge."

Cullison swung around. "Sure about that, Cass?" It was the first time for years that he had called the other by his first name except in irony.

"Sure."

"Let's have a look at the shoulder."

After he had done what he could for it Luck spoke bluffly. "This dashed feud is off, Cass. You've wiped the slate clean. When you killed Black-

He Turned to Run as the Other Fired

well you put me out of a hostile camp."

"I'm glad, so glad. Now we'll all be friends, won't we?" Kate cried.

Cass looked at her and at Curly, both of them radiant with happiness, and his heart ached for what he had missed. But he smiled now, "If it suits me if it does you."

He gave one hand to Luck and the other to his daughter.

Curly laughed gayly. "Everybody satisfied. I reckon."

CHAPTER XIII

Loose Threads

Those who knew about Sam's share in the planning of the Tin Cup hold-up kept their mouths close. All of the men implicated in the robbery were dead except Dutch. Cullison used his influence to get the man a light sentence, for he knew that he was not a criminal at heart. In return Dutch went down the line without so much as breathing Sam's name.

Luck saw to it that Curly got all the credit of frustrating the outlaws in their attempt on the Flyer and of capturing them afterward. In the story of the rescue of Kate he played up Flandrau's part in the pursuit at the expense of the other riders. For September was at hand and the young man needed all the prestige he could get. The district attorney had no choice but to go on with the case of the State versus Flandrau on a charge of rustling horses from the Bar Double M. But public sentiment was almost a unit in favor of the defendant.

The evidence of the prosecution was not so strong as it had been. All of his accomplices were dead and one of the men implicated had given it out on the last moment that the young man was not a party to the crime. The man who had owned the feed corral had sold out and gone to Colorado. The hotel clerk would not swear positively that the [illegible] was the man he had seen with the other rustlers.

Curly had one important asset no jury could forget. It counted for a good deal that Alec Flandrau, Billy Mackenzie and Luck Cullison were known to be back of him, but it was worth much more that his wife of a week sat beside him in the courtroom. Every look and motion of the girl-wife radiated love for the young scamp who had won her. And since they were tender-hearted all frontier men, they did not intend to spoil her joy. Moreover society could afford to take chances with the young fellow. [illegible] Long before they left the box each member of the jury knew that he was going to vote for acquittal.

It took the jury only one ballot to find a verdict of not guilty. The judge did not attempt to stop the uproar of glad cheers that shook the building when the decision was read. He knew it was not the prisoner so much they were cheering as the brave girl who had sat so pluckily for three days beside the husband she had made a man.

From the courtroom Curly walked out under the blue sky of Arizona a free man. But he knew that the best of his good fortune was that he did not go alone. For all the rest of their lives her firm little steps would move beside him to keep him true and steady. He could not go wrong now, for he was anchored to a responsibility that was a continual joy and wonder to him.

WIFE OFFERS HOME TO SWEETHEART OF DOUGHBOY HUSBAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 31—A love story, the aftermath of the war, exceeding in its fanatic situation the imagination of the most daring fiction writer, has been revealed thru the efforts to procede to this country of Miss Emily Nowles, a young English girl and her three months' old baby.

Miss Nowles and her child have come here at the invitation of Mrs. Cora M. Spiker, of Baltimore, wife of the girl's sweetheart. Mrs. Spiker in an affidavit declared her willingness to take into her home the girl and the baby who have been detained at Ellis Island since January 15. She is leading the legal fight to gain them admittance to this country. Perley R. Spiker, the husband-sweetheart and former aviator in the American Expeditionary Force wishes to adopt the child. His brother, Guy S. Spiker, wishes to marry Miss Nowles although he has never seen her. Miss Nowles and baby, through money furnished by Mrs. Spiker arrived here on the Lapland.

"I have been informed of all of the conditions of my husband's friendship with Miss Nowles while he was in an aviation training camp in England in 1918," Mrs. Spiker said in her affidavit. "It will not disturb the happiness of my husband or myself if Miss Nowles comes to reside in our home."

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 1

PETER AND JOHN IN SAMARIA.

(May be used with missionary applications.)

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:4-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—II Kings 17:24-33; Luke 10:38-25; John 4:1-42.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling Others About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter and John in a Strange City.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Three Missionaries and Their Triumphs.

I. Preaching the Word Everywhere (v. 4).

After the stoning of Stephen the enemies of the Lord were more active than ever in their efforts to stamp out the new faith. With Saul as their leader they rushed back to the city, dragged from their homes and imprisoned those who confessed Christ. In this the devil overreached himself, for the believers took flight and went everywhere preaching the word. The time had come for the witness-bearing to extend beyond Jerusalem and Judea. Preaching was not confined to the twelve. The Lord thus makes the devil's wickedness to further his own purpose. Frequently, in the hour of trial, Christians see more clearly their duty and bestir themselves to perform it. If Christians will not move on, the Lord will shove them on.

II. Philip Preaching the Gospel in Samaria. (vv. 5-13).

Hitherto the gospel had reached only Jews; now its scope broadens and a Jew is preaching to Samaritans, and Samaritans are rejoicing in the gospel of Christ proclaimed by a Jew. His preaching was fruitful for multitudes believed his message. Much joy in this Samaritan city followed the reception of the message. Both Samaritans and Jews were looking for Christ, so they were glad to know that the Christ had come. Christ is the one name and person who will break down race prejudice. In him there is unity and real brotherhood, for he is the universal man. The only hope of the world is Christ.

So great was Philip's success that Simon Magnus professed faith and was baptized. Simon was a sorcerer who by magical devices had made a great reputation, gaining control of many of the credulous and ignorant, so that they regarded him as some great one from God (v. 10). The people turned from this sorcerer to the gospel of Christ.

III. Peter and John Sent to Samaria (vv. 14-17).

The church at Jerusalem sent two of its best men to encourage the work. They discerned that the Spirit had not yet fallen upon the believers, so they laid hands upon them and the Spirit was given unto them. These Samaritans were really converted, regenerated, but had not yet been filled with the Spirit's gift. Believers should seek the Spirit's gift at once, for this will exclude the interests of the world. The mission of Peter and John shows the unity of the church—the mother church gave sanction to the new work in Samaria. Much of the work of the modern evangelist is a failure because it is not properly followed up by those who will instruct and bring the converts into relationship with the living church.

IV. Simon's Wicked Request (vv. 18-24).

When Simon saw that the power of Peter exceeded that which he possessed and that it was received through the laying on of hands, he offered money for the gift. This act reveals the hypocrisy of this man. He professed faith and was baptized, following after them for a selfish end. To desire and seek the gift of the Spirit for selfish aggrandizement is to be guilty of Simon's sin. All traffic in sacred things has been called "Simony," from the name of this sorcerer. Peter told Simon that he had neither part nor lot in this matter, that he should repent of his wickedness and pray to God for forgiveness. He requested Peter to pray for him.

Simon practiced the art of sorcery for gain and influence. Now that he found his profits diminishing and his influence waning, he endeavored to acquire new power. All persons who use their religion to further their ambitions to get gain are guilty of this sin. Sometimes men join the church for business, social, and political reasons; sometimes official positions are covered for the prestige and power they give. Let all who are using the name of the church for business purposes be warned by Peter's rebuke! Let Simon's doom be a solemn warning to all!

The Goal.

The goal on which our eyes must be set is a church that will, in its own corporate life, conspicuously express the Christian ideal of fellowship and brotherhood, and at the same time strive persistently to mold national, industrial and social life in accordance with the principles which are the fountain light of all its days.

Delight in Gbd's Work.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or other skin eruption, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate and hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

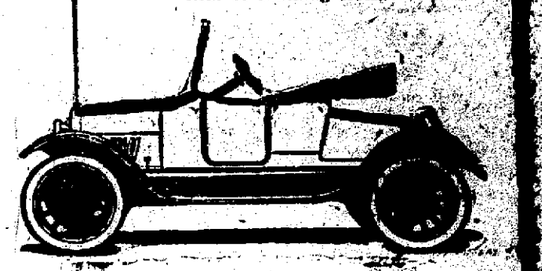

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should first try this for a week and notice results.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letter, and many others like it, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

CHANGE OF SOME SORT SURE

Returning Soldier Feels He Has at Least Earned a Better Chance Than He Has Hitherto Been Granted.

Article III.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Europe wears an anxious look. One thought is arousing her from the stupor of her misery. She opens her eyes in wide amazement when she notices and notes the striking change that has come over her children. It is puzzling her, although she well knows what they have gone through, how patiently and uncomplainingly they suffered. It isn't strange to her that they have changed, when she remembers the peace of the years before the war, the quiet, sane lives they lived, and the four years in which they lived in wet, foul sewers called trenches, slept in holes on the edge of a strip of hell called No Man's Land, breathed the smell of burning flesh, saw their pals "go west," buried their dead, grinned at pain, laughed at death. Nerves of steel could not stand what they have gone through without being changed by it.

They have put on mufti again. It is strange to them. The quiet streets are dull. The demobilized soldier feels the letdown. The tenseness over depression sets in. During the war he didn't have time to think of anything except the job ahead of him. Every minute, every move was life or death to him. Now he realizes for the first time what he has gone through, wonders why he is alive. Two thoughts possess his mind: one the memory of every minute of the days and nights of the war—the other, of what is ahead of him, what is he going to do with his life! He is at a strange crossroads. The word "job" doesn't mean much to him. It isn't that he is lazy. He has to pinch himself to realize that it is over and that he is back from the war.

Earned Right to Better Place.

Between the whizz of machine bullets and the shriek of shrapnel he spent his time thinking, and his thoughts were not all about the war. He never got used to the war, but he learned to forget it. He has brought more than souvenirs and memories from his experience. He has brought home thoughts, ideas and ambitions from the trenches. Many a night, looking over No Man's Land, listening to the "banshee" of the war, he thought and resolved that if he ever came back he wanted, and would have, a better chance in this queer thing called Life. He feels that he has paid for a place, and he has paid. He has earned the right to a decent place in the world, for which he fought. He helped save the world and he looks to that world to save him from a meaningless machine existence. If it doesn't he has made up his mind to use force. He is willing to work, wants to work, but he insists on being part of his work, rather than his work being all of him. He sees, feels and measures things from an intensely human angle. He feels his humanness. The war emphasized the value and meaning of the human being. It was life or death. He is alive. He wants a human interest in his work.

Hundreds of demobilized soldiers in different parts of Europe, in different words, in different languages, have said to me: "If the world isn't going to give us a better chance than it gave us before the war, then the world wasn't worth fighting for. When we fought, they told us it was to make the world safe for democracy and to make life worth while. We thought this meant us and ours. We have learned that life isn't only a question of a job and enough to eat, we want to be treated like human beings. A man wants to feel that his work means more to him than just wages. He spends most of his time at work, the rest of it is spent with his family and in sleeping so he will be able to work the next day. Why shouldn't he have an interest in the business, and why shouldn't the business have an interest in him? We don't want to run the business, all we ask is a say in it, a friendly say in it. Some people think that to be fed is to be free—it isn't. Being free means being treated like a human being."

I have found many good honest men and women who have lost interest in work. They say, "We don't get a fair share of what we make. We fight among ourselves for jobs because we have to or starve, and they pay us as little as they can." I am not reasoning or arguing this question. I am stating a fact which indicates the state of mind of millions of men and women in Europe who did their bit for civilization during the past four years.

Fair Hearing Must Be Granted.

Calling these people bolshevists doesn't silence them nor solve the problem. Such tactics irritate and deepen the unrest. Their grievance must be given a fair, patient hearing. Their attitude of mind must be reckoned with if we hope to get back to normal living. I have heard some say that these people must be given to understand that they must work or starve. No law or government in the world is powerful enough to compel people to work. This is particularly true of the people today. To think of using force is foolish, suicidal.

We have had enough of force during the last four years and the farther we get away from the idea of beating one another into submission the better off we all shall be. The present unrest is positively dangerous. It isn't like any unrest we have ever had before. It is the restlessness of human beings who have been face to face with death. We need a lot of calmness and common sense. By kindly conference we must try to understand each other, and by just compromise help each other. Of one thing I am sure, and that is, if an effort is made to use blind, brute force on the working people of the world, the present unrest will be set in motion, a whirlwind will break upon the world.

The plain, open road back to happiness is co-operation. If we stop for a moment and realize what we have been through, and the changes that have come upon us while we were going through it, we will find getting together easy. Unrest blocks the road. It fetters the will to work. We must face the truth, and the sooner we do, the better. The world is broke. The war has bankrupted Europe. One thing, and one thing only, will bring us back to sane, normal living. It is work. Sympathy and understanding will do more to secure peace, stimulate work, than defiance, challenge and threats.

A normal world is one in which men live and work together in peace, where all men have a chance to be happy. This means an interest in work, a joy in working—living to work, rather than working to live. Men must have food, clean wholesome food, and enough of it to do their work without exhaustion. Men must have clothes. Not only the quantity and quality necessary to protect their bodies from the weather, but clothes that satisfy the normal instinct for appearing clean and neat. Decent clothes sustain self-respect. Men without them are less normal and moral.

All Need a Playtime.

There must be a time between the end of the day and the beginning of sleep in which men can know and enjoy their families. The man who is so used up by his day's work that he falls asleep at his supper table isn't playing fair with his wife and children, and his employer isn't playing fair with him. All men are boys, even after they have gray hair. This quality is probably the finest and best in them. They need a playtime, a recreation time. They lose something and the world loses more when they do not get it. It is not enough that bodies are fed, minds must not be starved. Light is the right of every human being with eyes. Education is light. The human race must have light. None of us were intended to live in darkness. Children are entitled to a school time, a jump-the-rope time, a top time, a play time. A child who enters manhood or womanhood without ever having known a childhood goes through life with something missing, something lost. The creed of the changed world is that while the world doesn't owe anyone a living, it is obligated to give every human being a chance to make a decent living. The new commandment is that this chance must be given.

I found these thoughts planted in the unrest in Europe. They are strongly, deeply rooted in the consciousness of the people. They are growing. Men and women are gardening, cultivating, protecting these ideas. Any effort to uproot or destroy these flowering thoughts will be resented and fought by the gardeners. They are not weed thoughts—they are the blooms of hope and they belong to the poor. They will fight and die before they will see these hope growths trampled under foot. This is the only garden they have. The blood of the dead fertilized it. The living care for it.

OHIO SPORTS JOIN CLEARFIELD MEN IN HUNTING CAMP

Allen W. McCoy, a contractor and real estate dealer of Akron, Ohio, is in Clearfield in the interest of a bunch of Akron live wire business men who have joined the Penna & Ohio Rod and Gun Club, which organization is closing a deal with the Whitmer-Steele Company for two tracts of mountain land adjoining View Point and the Joseph Shaw estate lands on Lick Run. The new organization, which will embrace the Tar Kiln Hunting club, composed principally of Clearfield sportsmen are arranging to incorporate their organization and will erect a new club house and make other improvements on their 2000 acres tract.

The Penna. & Ohio Club lands adjoin the State game reserve and are very desirable. They also join the Goshen Gun Club preserve on the north.

Mr. McCoy has been coming to Clearfield the past several seasons and possesses a whole host of warm friends here, who are not only glad to meet him but glad to know that he and his Ohio friends are going to be permanently interested here.

Mr. McCoy during his stay will also look at several small timber tracts for sale in this section, with the idea of securing rough lumber for his future building operations in the hustling "rubber city."

The Club has elected the following officers:

President, W. R. Fargo, of Clearfield.

Vice President, C. W. Patton, of Akron, Ohio.

Secretary, Allen R. McCoy, of Akron, Ohio

Ass't. Secretary, C. J. Young, Clearfield.

Treasurer, S. I. Sankey, Clearfield.

Board of Directors, M. M. Condon, W. Blair Fargo, of Clearfield; T. C. Conners, Frank E. McCoy and B. F. Sparr, of Akron, Ohio.

CLEARFIELD BOY IN LUCK

Clearfield people generally will be interested in the following taken from today's Philadelphia Public Ledger.

It became known yesterday in independent circles that Richard Weglein, president of City Council, would announce the name of his new clerk as soon as council authorizes creation of the position.

According to independent leaders the new clerk will be Frank W. Short, political writer for the Philadelphia Record, a resident of the Thirty-third ward. The finance committee approved the creation of the clerkship Thursday after a vigorous battle from the Vare minority, led by Joseph P. Gaffney, who was chairman of the old councilmanic finance committee. Mr. Gaffney characterized the position as "useless" and said the clerk would be simply "a valet to the president." The matter will be reported for final action at the next meeting of Council.

Teh salary of the new clerk would be $3500.

The fortunate young man is the son of United States Marshal and Mrs. John F. Short and a former Clearfield boy who has certainly made good since taking up newspaper work in Philadelphia.

A Statement

Three months ago this Company organized an Employe's Co-operative Council as a means of forming a closer business relationship between employer and employe. This council also provided definite channels through which any and all grievances might be taken and adjusted through a commitete of three elected by the employes and a like committee selected by the management.

Friday evening, January 30th, at 7:30 p. m. the operators on the Clearfield exchange presented an impossible salary demand, with an ultimatum that if the same were not granted they would walk out at eight o'clock Saturday morning. The management pointed out the irregularity and impossibility of this procedure and requested that the matter be taken up in the regular way for adjustment.

The employes refused.

The management then requested an immediate audience with the employes affected for later in the evening. This was likewise refused or declared impossible to get some of the girls together.

A personal interview was then had with two of the operators on duty and an adjustment satisfactory to them as individuals was offered, but they refused to remain on duty unless all of the girls would agree to remain.

The demands made were as impossible as they were unfair, to both employes and employer, and the employes' refusal to consider a method of arbitration resulted in the walk-out this morning.

The action of employes was not only unfair to the company and to the public, but bordered very close to the dishonorable, in that they refused to permit the chief operator admission to the operating room and hid or destroyed rate and other records, property of the company, on the switchboard for their guidance.

In this emergency we appeal to the public and our patrons for their kindly consideration, and to former operators for assistance, temporarily at least.

Against Grasshopper.

When a grasshopper jumps he has no idea where he will light, but merely launches himself into the air and trusts to chance. Through the efforts of the agricultural agents, however, it is coming about that after a few trials the insect learns that he is almost certain to land some place where he isn't wanted.

Around the World in a Day.

If you could fly in an airplane at a steady speed of 1,039 miles an hour and keep it up for twenty-four hours, and were to start westward at noon on the equator, the sun would not set for you that day, but the earth would make one complete revolution under your feet.

Use of Fetters Ancient.

The use of fetters goes back to ancient times. Fetters were usually made of brass and also in pairs, the word being in the dual number. Iron was occasionally employed for the purpose. (Psalms 105:18; 149:8.)

Allen M. E. Church Buys a Parsonage

The congregation of the Allen A. M. E. church has been greatly handicapped in its efforts for good among the colored people of this community because of lack of a parsonage in which to house their pastor. Recognizing this great need and in the hope of remedying the condition a congregational meeting was held recently at which the pastor, Rev. John W. Dixon presided, when it was decided to erect a parsonage on the rear of their church lot, corner New and Merrill streets. The plan decided upon called for a dwelling to cost $2700 and the members of the congregation present delighted themselves to contribute in from $5.00 to $25.00 subscriptions the sum of $300 by February 22nd, with a similar amount by April 18th.

Since that arrangement the church committee found it possible to purchase the double house at No. 116 Merrill street for $2200, with possession given April 1st, and decided to make that deal instead of building a new structure.

The membership of the Allen church is small and the means of the members are more or less limited therefore it has been decided to ask the good people of Clearfield to assist this struggling congregation to solve their difficulty and become a better force for good in the community by reason thereof and a plea is hereby made for general contributions to this worthy cause. Every other demonstration in Clearfield is provided with suitable and convenient church properties and we believe our charitable Christian people will respond to this appeal to their generosity and help our colored brethren attain the goal of their ambition.

Subscriptions in any amount will be thankfully received and may be paid to H. S. Whiteman, Jr., at the Clearfield National bank. Make all checks payable to the African M. E. church.

The following members of the congregation are authorized to solicit for the parsonage fund: Mason B. Russell, Emmit Burhannon, Luke Smith, W. P. Simpson, Sol Stone, Gus Mallary, Henry Wiggins, Mack McCoy, Deacon Williams and Mrs. Josephine Lane.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's recipe to bring color, lustre and youthfulness to hair when faded, streaked or gray

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance.

Quit Meat When Kidneys Bother

Take a glass of Salts before Breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder is Troubling you

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, diziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon uice, combined withlithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot inure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure thereby avoiding serious kidney aomplications.

SUPREME COUNCIL WILL NOT REVI[illegible] LIST OF GERMAN WAR CRIMINA[illegible]

ORIGINAL LIST OF EIGHT HUNDRED WILL STAND: OFFICIALLY STATED

PARIS, Jan. 31—The list of Germans, guilty of war crimes, to stand trial before Allied tribunals will not be revised it was stated officially today. The list containing more than 800 names will be handed to Germany, February 10. The Council will decide on the manner of remitting the note to Germany. Recently a Berlin dispatch reported the German government had dispatched a note to the Allies in Paris asking a modification in enforcement of the clause in the Versailles treaty demanding that Germany surrender the persons accused of war crimes. The German government, it was stated, feared that the surrender of the accused might percipitate internal troubles in the republic.

ANOTHER BRITISH EDITOR SCATHINGLY DENOUNCES AMERICA

LONDON, Jan. 31—"Europe is not going to submit to financial domination by the United States any more than she submitted to Prussian military domination," Ralph Blumenfeld, editor of the London Express declared in an interview today. "The letter of Secretary Glass to Homer Ferguson, President of the United Stases Chamber of Commerce in which he declared that America could go no further in financial assistance to Europe shows America in the position of a rich man turning his poor relations from door." The editor defended his scathing editorial on the international financial situation "as all that was necessary to bring the situation to a head."

"There is a group revolting in Europe against the exchange situation," Blumenfeld declared. He declared he will start a campaign through his newspaper to urge Great Britain to cease buying from the United States until the exchanges were more favorable. The editorial urged an international financial conference where a plan could be worked out to stabilize the present conditions. "The present situation," Blumenfeld said, "means ruin for Europe, ruin for America afterwards and eventually ruin for civilization. If it was your duty to make the world safe for democracy," he continued, "how much more is it your duty to save the world from ruin. The people will revolt against the present situation. Europe is determined not to remain in financial bondage to the United States forever."

Unless conditions are righted soon, the editor predicted, there will be financial clashes in Europe which will spread to America. Therefore it behooves the United States to cooperate with us in view of her own interests.

INCOME TAX MEN FINISH PLANNING FOR THEIR TASK

The Deputy Internal Revenue Collectors for the section of the Western Pennsylvania District presided over by M. I. Gardner, of Clearfield, General Deputy, this morning concluded their round table conference which had been in session in The Dimeling Harlors since Thursday evening last.

This conference was called for discussion and mapping out plans for the collection of the 1919 income tax. Those participating were: M. I. Gardner, of Clearfield; Charles Laughlin, New Bethlehem; E. F Reilley, Johnstown; L. F. Saniel, Latrobe; M. L. McKean and H. J. Cartmell, Bradford, R. C. Bundy, DuBois; J. W. Keppler, Osceola Mills; G. B. Straub, St. Marys.

It was expected that the collectors would be able to begin their work imediately following this meeting but on account of failure to receive necessary supplies the start was delayed for the present.

The revenue men are a clean cut bunch of young business men and will make the process of extracting the government's share of your last year's excess profits as painless as possible.

These "revenue men" are not directly charged with the enforcement of the "dry law" and might even be invited to sample your private stock with perfect safety while figuring up your income, and while we don't know how far they would go along that line naturally expect that a fellow in this position ought to be in position to list the ten "best cellars" in his district at the end of the fiscal year.

OLD COURT HOUSE RECORD TELLS OF A "REAL WINTER"

We have heard a great deal of complaint from "kickers" regarding the alleged severity of the present winter since winter really started about the middle of December last. The regular or generally pessimistic weather shark takes delight in comparing the present and recently past gentle zero zephyrs with "one of those old time winters."

In order that these fault-finders may realize just what a "real old-time winter" was like we publish the following "weather note" taken from an old minute book in the office of the County Commissinoers.

At the time mentioned John W. Howe ,the Morrisdale merchant, was Commissioner's clerk and we found the following entry in the old book in Mr. Howe's handwriting and signed by him:

Now, February 2nd, 1881, at 6 o'clock a. m. the thermometer at G. L. Reed's (present High school site) registered 36 degrees below zero. At 10 o'clock a. m. the sun is shining bright and thermometer indicates 2° degrees below zero. The ground-hog saw his shadow at 8 a. m.

February 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th the thermometer ranged every morning from 12 to 36 below and on Sunday morning, February 6th it registered 26 below. There is three feet of snow in the woods."

We admit that even we have sometimes doubted the weather tales told by some of these old fellows about what happened long ago but when you get a fellow down in black and white in a public record even though that record is forty years old you simply have to accept the written record. That was sure "some winter."

DEMPSEY AGAIN ASSAILED

CHICAGO, Jan. 31—Hyde Parke Post No. 34 today made public objections to the "vindication of heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey by the Milwuakee Post of the American Legion. "Milwaukee also vindicates Victor Berger," comander F. B. Flannery said. "Vindication seems to be one of the best things they do out there." Dempsey's appointment to honorary membership in the Milwaukee Post was illegal, according to Flanery. The Legion does not appoint anyone to honorary membership.

MISS YORKE IS PRAISED BY THE PRESS

Mr. Provenia Also Comes In For Generouse Praise Every Place He Has Appeared

WILL APPEAR HERE FEB. 9

The work of Miss Helen Yorke and Wadsworth Provandia, who will appear in concert at the High School auditorium on February 9th under the auspices of the Woman's Club has been highly praised in other cities, where they have sung, as is shown by the several newspaper clippings which follow:

The Springfield Daily Republican says of Mr. Provendie—"The chief work of the evening devolved upon Mr. Provandie, a baritone, who had not been here before and who delighted his hearers with a remarkable interpretation of his extremely difficult and trying part, technically. Some of the quaintly florid passages by which the composer has expressed the medieval form of the theme must severely tax a singer's powers but Mr. Provandia sang with ease and security and brought out to the full the artificial yet genuine emotion with which the work is surcharged."

The Boston Post says, "Wadsworth Provandia baritone, is a singer of undoubted talent; he grasped the often subtle mood of his music and sang with youth and impulse as though he too were yaphsodist of the fourteenth century."

Mr. Provandia is termed "King of Baritones" by Jean de Raszke, under whom he studied in Paris.

The Elmira Star Gazette says of Miss Yorke who appeared in the Lyceum theatre of that city with the De Feo Grand Opera Company in the opera "Lucia Di Lamermoor."

"Miss Yorke is a real find in the musical world. She is only 22 years old, of dainty figure and attractive. Her portrayal of the mad scene was most realistic and not overdrawn. Miss Yorke sang two seasons in opera in Italy after she arrived there in 1914. She sings the 'Barber of Saville,' 'Rigoletto,' and 'Lucia,' but personally she regards 'La Traviatte' as being too heavy for her as yet. Miss Yorke's mother accompanies her on her travels."

When Miss Yorke appeared with the De Feo Opera company, in the same opera in the Fulton opera house at Lancaster, the Lancaster Examiner said this of her work: "Helen Yorke, who appeared in the title role, had a superb voice, clear as a bell, and of a volume that filled every corner of the house. It was a marvel, looking at her slight physique, how she could have such a wonderful voice. Her acting alone would have charmed the audience without her voice, and she could win as high a place as an actress as a singer. The audience warmed to her from her first appearance on the stage and she was rapturously applauded at the conclusions of every appearance."

TODAY'S REPORTS SHOW FLU ON INCREASE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—The influenza epidemic today continued to increase according to reports to the United States Public Health service. Officials who have studied the situation are far from alarmed.

New York state, exclusive of New York City, has 1,338 cases in the last 24 hours with 89 cases of pneumonia.

Massachusetts reported 955 cases of influenza of which 318 were in Boston.

Missouri figures report 542 in St. Louis and 54 in St. Joseph.

The disease is reported breaking out in the winter resorts. 21 cases were reported at Palm Beach.

TREATY FIGHT WILL BE SENT TO SENATE

Bi-Partisan Conference Ends With Failure Of Leaders To Make Any Progress

WILL GO ON FLOOR FEB. 10

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31—Formal notice was given in the Senate today that on Tuesday, February 10, Senator Hitchcock will move to take up the German treaty in open session. Senator Walsh from Montana, gave the notice five minutes after the Senate met. He urged Lodge to put into the record a statement he made yesterday following the collapse of the bi-partisan treaty conference. Lodge offered a statement by Hitchcock and asked that the two statements be printed in the Senate document which will make it available for general distribution throughout the country.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 31 — The treaty controversy is now going back to the Senate as a whole as the result of the collapse of the bi-partisan conference compromise efforts. Senator Walsh from Montana will give the word today for a formal calling of the treaty in the open Senate by announcing that on Tuesday, February 10, Senator Hitchcock will formally move "that the Senate now proceed to consider the treaty with Germany." Walsh's notice will set in motion a chain of events preliminary to the Hitchcock move.

Between now and February 10, a number of questions must be decided upon. They include, first, will the Democrats support Hitchcock practically as a unit when he makes his move or will they desert his leadership in sufficient numbers to prevent resumption of the final debate? Second, will the Republican mild reservationists compromise with the Democrats in sufficient number to make Hitchcock's move successful? Third, how will the "irrevocable" Republicans vote? Fourth, will Senator Lodge maintain his opposition to call up the treaty or will he surrender his vote in the face of the country's demand for immediate ratification?

The answer to some of the questions depends upon the conferences to be held between now and February 10. As the thing now stands Senator Hitchcock believes that 43 or 44 of the 46 Democrats will support the move. Some of them, however, have expressed their strong opposition to it on the grounds that to get the treaty into the Senate again might block other legislation on which there is a great deal of attention demanded.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—All parley between Republicans and Democrats in the senate intended to bring about a compromise on the peace treaty reservations came to a decisive and definite end today.

The bi-partisan conference, which has been sitting in Senator Lodge's office broke up in disagreement and will never be convened again.

The disagreement came after Senator Lodge, on behalf of the Republicans, had stated his most positive refusal to yield to any compromise on the reservations on Article Ten and the Monroe Doctrine.

Senator Hitchcock thereupon announced that his next stop will be to move in the Senate on February 10 to bring up the treaty for discussion on the floor. The senator believes his motion will be supported by at least 43 Democrats and by enough Republicans to make a majority, thereby throwing the entire treaty question again open to debate in the senate.

Before leaving tonight on a flying trip to Nebraska Senator Hitchcock stated that Senator Walsh, of Montana will give notice in the senate tomorrow of the motion, which Senator Hitchcock will make on his return.

Just before the conference broke up, the Democrats made their final stand for a change in the Lodge resolution on Article 10. Having failed to get their own proposal accepted, they threw into the hopper the draft of a reservation prepared by former President Taft.

In thrusting the Taft reservation into the arena of discussion, the Democrats thought they had made a clever political move, in that it forced the Republicans to reject a draft written by their former leader. But Senator Lodge, without the quiver of a smile, announced that the reservation could not be accepted. The Democrats at once anounced that the limit of negotiations had been reached and that further conference was unnecessary.

Albert Kenard a student at State College, is spending the week end with his parents Mr. and Mrs. John Kenard on Fourth street.

NOTED ENTERTAINER WILL LECTURE HERE NEXT THURSDAY EVE

The third number of the High School lecture course will be presented Thursday evening, February 5th when Lou J. Beauchamp will present his original philosophy and humor.

Mr. Beauchamp has lived a peculiar life. Losing his mother when a babe, he spent the early years of his life among the Creek, Choctaw and Cherokee Indians and uses many of the customs of the tribes as illustrations in his lectures. Denied school and college privileges, he was taught his letters by a young girl, at once became an omnivorous reader, and at the age of fourteen was contributing prose and poetry to New York papers, and at twenty was one of the editors of a noted Cincinnati daily newspaper.

He has traveled one million miles in the old world and the new, investigating the lives of the underworld in the slums and dens of the world's greatest cities, writing his experiences for the press. Because of these unique experiences he brings to the platform gifts that have been given to few others, and his love and sympathy for humanity enable him to use these experiences in his lectures in a way to benefit and please his hearers.

He has written books that have been translated into foreign tongues, and of which many editions have been sold, and his poems of child-life are found in many collections of poetry, the repertoire of readers, and in scrap-books all over the land.

It is doubtful if any man on the platform causes as much laughter in an evening as does Mr. Beauchamp, yet all the time he is teaching truths that send his auditors out into the world better men and women, determined to do more than ever before to bring sunshine and song into the lives of those with whom they come in contact.

As a Chautauqua lecturer Mr. Beauchamp stands at the top and has never been able to answer all the calls made by Chautauqua managers. At some of them he has lectured two and three times annually for the past six years.

When a tender influence stole into the heart of Lou Beaucheamp and turned his footsteps into the paths of light, a myriad of messages of mirth and happiness were born in his mind—messages which glowed with the awakened love of humanity in his own soul and scintillated with the sunshine of a newly-inspired genius. Beauchamp is a verbal cyclone, with a laugh and a cry in every minute. He is a minister of the Gospel of Sunshine and thousands of listeners have first seen the light through his ministrations. He is the most beloved of all the lyceum sojourners, because he has been his own best disciple in the Gospel of Love.

H.&C. OPERATORS REFUSED TO GO TO WORK

Assert Dollar A Day Wage Is Insufficient For Work the Company Requires Of Them

PARTIAL SERVICE RENDERED

Mrs. Bimpkins could not hold her regular morning telephone chat with Mrs. Blimkins this morning, neither could any of aforesaid ladies call the grocery and request immediate delivery of a spool of thread. In fact the ordinary procedure of living was considerably side tracked when the telephone girls at the local H. & C. exchange came out on strike. The girls, nine in number, called at The Progress office shortly after eight o'clock to tell their story. The spokeswoman said they felt called upon to do that because of threats which had been made to call the maledictions of the public down upon them by publishing their names and telling how ungrateful they were. The spokeswoman for the strikers said the telephone company is paying them only 12c an hour but for the purpose of making bookkeeping and accounting more easy made the daily stipend $1.00 per day.

The principal demand of the striking operators is for an increase in pay and they allege that when they interviewed the manager this morning and presented demands for 19c per hour that he ran them out of the office and threatened to have them black listed at all of the other places of employment throughout the town.

Ordinarily the matter of wages should not concern anybody except the employer and employe, but, in the case of a public service corporation such as a telephone company is, the public has a right to expect that a wage will be paid which will bring about satisfactory working conditions and an increase in the efficiency of the service that will be given by labor well paid. There is a well established axiom that we get just what we pay for and with the telephone service generally in Clearfield we are certainly getting 12c an hour service.

Whether or not the small pay of the operators, 12c an hour, is responsible for the inefficient service we have received it not determined but it is a cinch that that is about all it has been worth. From an economic standpoint these operators are entitled to more money but from the standpoint of efficiency in the light of past service it is doubtful whether an increase is merited. Poor telephone service is worse than none at all and out of this dispute we hope there will come a higher standard of service. It is not likely, however, that a higher standard of service can have as its foundation a 12c an hour wage.

BLOODY IMPRINT OF HAND GIVES CLUE TO SNOW BANK CRIME

CLEVELAND, Jan. 31—A bloody hand mark on a telephone pole and a battered derby were clews which the police today believed would lead to the solution of the mysterious death of two men found here yesterday. One of the victims was identified as Salvadore P. Russo, of New York. The other is still unknown. Revenge was believed to have been the motive. Search was being made today for a man said to be the leader in the Italian colony in Buffalo. Police here believe he can clear up the mystery.

C. H. S. FINE[illegible] OF THE CELLA[illegible] AT LAST

Local Boys Put Up Classy Exhibition And Triumph Over Brookville Five

GOING TO WIN RIGHT ALONG

'Ray team! We're out of the [illegible]

We had to let off a little [illegible] steam before we could settle down enough to tell you just how it happened. Maybe it isn't any great feat to defeat the only other team in the League that hasn't won a game (and hasn't yet) but even so last night's victory has given C. H. S. a lot of encouragement. Besides, the fact that Brookville was tied with Clearfield for last place doesn't say that the visitors couldn't play basket ball. They played a good game but only left thirteen points in the dust because of the superior shooting of the locals.

When the Red and Black [illegible] piling up scores at an [illegible] rate during the first half [illegible] though Brookville would [illegible] to the starting [illegible] away to a fine [illegible] tip-off [illegible] [illegible] of basket [illegible] ed at a loss as to where to [illegible] ball when they needed it, but they got it they used it to good advantage. Like the Peace Treaty, [illegible] that advantage had several [illegible] tions. As long as they played a [illegible] ing game, the visitors were a [illegible] for C. H. S., but when it came to shooting they fell far behind. In the first half they caged but one [illegible] goal.

Starting the second half with a rush, Brookville soon drew up on Clearfield and for a time were but a few points in the rear. For several minutes they kept within winning distance of Clearfield's score but C. H. S. continued at their same [illegible] pace and when Brookville's spurt grew weak the locals again drew away from them and carried their score to 44 points leaving Brookville with 31.

Clearfield showed a [illegible] improvement in their team work last night but still did not play the game they are capable of staging. Their shot fouls with a clock-like regularity until a fall in the second half disarranged his "works," and his floor work, coupled with that of Kephart, accounted for the small number of baskets caged by Brookville's forwards.

As we said before, it may not make a very great impression to say that we won from the team in the last place, but we have a short-[illegible] of chance for improvement.

Just watch our dust! w[illegible]

Last night's players were:

OUR TWO PRICES LOOK PRETTY GOOD TILL YOU SEE THE WAGES

More than 1,600 years ago imperial Rome tried to halt rampant profiteering by decreeing death to all who charged above a fixed scale of prices.

Reduced to our measures, butter was to cost not more than five cents a pound and eggs not more than five cents a dozen. Two pounds of beef or mutton were to be not more than five cents; five best cucumbers or one large melon, one cent; five heads of the best lettuce, two cents; fifty stalks of fresh asparagus, five cents; a good chicken, twenty-four cents, or a duck, sixteen cents; the best sea fish, ten cents each.

The limit for the best Falernian wine was sixteen cents a quart. Patrician ladies shoes were to sell for not more than sixty cents a pair and the most fashionable cloak bag (not beaded) might cost up to six dollars. The limit for 100 roses was three cents.

The glamour of these prices vanishes when you reach the wage scale. A common bricklayer could not get more than one cent wages a day; a driver of a camel, ass or mule, eight cents; a farm worker, ten cents; a stone mason, twenty cents; a shipwright or marble worker, twenty-four cents; a wall painter, twenty-eight cents, or a figure painter, sixty cents.

The pedagogue might charge twenty cents a month for each pupil, but a barber could not take more than one cent for a hair-trim.

The limit of the lawyer's fee for an applicatoin to the court was one dollar, but if he had to sit through the trial of a case he might charge four dollars.

Alas, Diocletian's price fixing didn't work. According to the historian Lactantius, the dealers in non-perishable commodities refused to sell, famines arose, breeding brawls and bloodshed and the imperial edict soon became a dead letter.—(Selected)

SINN FEIN HAS PLAN TO KILL HOME RULE PROGRAM

By WEBB MILLER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

DUBLIN (By Mail)— "Without shedding a drop of blood, we can ridicule Lloyd George's little home rule scheme and make a laughing stock of the government."

Thus one of the Sinn Fein leaders mentioned questions as to what the Sinn Feiners intend to do in case the government goes ahead with the enforcement of the new home rule plan.

Although firmly convinced that the government will never attempt to enforce the scheme, the Sinn Feiners are quietly mapping out a course of action to upset the government's plans. As tentatively decided upon the Sinn Feiners have evolved an ingenious scheme to twist the government's home rule plan into a "weapon of offense."

The course of action now under discussion is as follows:

The Sinn Feiners would order their followers to participate in good faith in the elections for the parliament which is to be created for the South of Ireland under the premier's bill. And it is practically certain that the Sinn Feiners would sweep the elections in the South and dominate the parliament.

Then at the first session of the parliament and as the first act of the parliament, the Sinn Feiners would give the home rule scheme a dramatic "coup de grace" be declaring Ireland a republic and proclaiming its severence from England. The leaders are certain that such a "Declaration of Independence" would be passed by an overwhelming majority in the parliament.

Thereafter the Parliament would be continued as the "Dail Eireann" or Assembly of Irish Republic. Inasmuch as the original "Dail Eireann" has been suppressed by the government as illegal, Sinn Fein would thus jockey the government into the unpleasant position of having themselves recreated the "Dail."

So the Sinn Feiners are chuckling in their sleeves and waiting for the government's next move.

"The Lloyd George scheme is not home rule and we won't have it," said the Sinn Fein leader. "By our scheme we will accomplish several things besides getting rid of the home rule bill. We will make the British government a laughing stock before the world, and let it prove to the world by its own actions that Ireland—or at least the majority of it—demands self-determination and independence. What could do that better than to have the first parliament set up by the government itself declare for independence as its first official act. And that's what it will do if they attempt to enforce this so-called home rule bill."

"DOC" LONG STRONG FOR CLEARFIELD NOW

K. A. Long, of Williamsport, the veteran trainman of the N. Y. C. passenger train is spending the week end with friends here. "Doc" has been braking the passenger train in and out of Clearfield ever since the Beech Creek R. R. twisted its way into this region but he never saw Clearfield above the Second street bridge until one day last summer he took a day off and came up town and evidently saw something that pleased him for every so often he stops on and lets the old train take care of itself for a few days.

The Royal Society Club met at the home of Margaret Lynch last evening. Cards and dancing furnished the entertainment. Delicious refreshments were served.

SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless, rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly Flandrau and his chum, Mac, both practically mere boys, become involved in a horse-stealing adventure. Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Saguache, Ariz., the band separates. Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to lynch Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's undoing. Flandrau learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son Sam, who has quarreled with his father. Cullison goes bail for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescues Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flandrau and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flandrau sees some move is being planned and becomes convinced it is train robbery. Sam leaves the ranch to go to Saguache. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his lieutenant, Lute Blackwell, arrange to hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the scene. Stone thus glutting his revenge on the ex-sheriff through his son's death and disgrace. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison's. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confidant of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

Part II.

CHAPTER I.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a sheepman, Cass Fendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.—Saguache is electrified by the news of the holdup of express messengers, the bandits securing $20,000. Cullison pays his poker debts, and shortly afterward Mackenzie and Alex Flandrau, his closest friends, learn he is suspected of the express robbery, his hat having been found on the scene and he being missing.

CHAPTER III.—Kate goes to Saguache for a consultation with Mackenzie, Alex Flandrau and Curly. All are convinced of Luck's innocence. The sheriff reveals that besides the finding of Cullison's hat, and his payment of his debts, Cass Fendrick had seen the robber and is almost certain it was Luck. Cullison is about to enter a homestead claim which will practically put Fendrick out of business.

CHAPTER IV.—Katy's shrewdness reveals how Cullison had taken Fendrick's hat when he left the Roundup club, and suspicion points strongly to a frameup on Fendrick's part and to his being responsible for Luck's disappearance. The sheriff receives a series of notes turning at the "Jack of Hearts." Curly finds a cigar store by that name and secures evidence that the proprietress, Mrs. Wylie, knows what happened to Luck.

CHAPTER V.—In the cellar of the cigar store Flandrau finds a cipher message left by Cullison, and follows the scent. Luck is held prisoner by Fendrick and Blackwell in a sheep herder's cabin in the mountains. Fendrick wants him to sign a relinquishment of his homestead rights, conditional to his release.

CHAPTER VI.—Uneasy over the possible results of his kidnaping of the cattleman, Fendrick tells Kate Cullison enough of the story to induce her to accompany him to her father. Cullison, fearing for his daughter's safety should she be left at the mercy of Blackwell, signs the relinquishment and accompanies Kate home.

CHAPTER VII.—Bucky O'Connor, of the Texas Rangers, lifelong friend of Cullison, takes a hand in the game, he and Curly making a search for the missing man. O'Connor arrests Fendrick, charging him with the abduction. Cullison seeks Fendrick with the object of punishing the sheepman personally, but O'Connor forbids, holding Fendrick under arrest.

CHAPTER VIII.—O'Connor apprehends Blackwell on his way to Soapy Stone's ranch and brings him to Saguache. Blackwell admits the express robbery, claiming Fendrick took the money from him. He also explains the circumstances of Cullison's abduction.

CHAPTER IX.—Blackwell escapes from prison and joins Soapy Stone. Sam Cullison receives notice from Stone of the approaching train holdup. Curly and Mackenzie drug the boy's coffee, and Curly, in Sam's clothes, takes his place on the train. The robbery takes place according to schedule, and Stone believes Sam to have been killed. Curly overcomes Stone's man, left with the horses, and gets away with them. He meets Luck Cullison and the posse. They intercept Stone, Blackwell and "Bad Bill" Cranston. Blackwell surrenders, but escapes. Stone and Cranston are killed.

CHAPTER X.—Back at Saguache, Luck Cullison and his son are reconciled, while Curly and Kate disclose their mutual love.

CHAPTER XI.—Kate Cullison, while riding on the range, disappears. Suspecting she has been abducted, a searching party is formed, Fendrick joining it.

CHAPTER XII.

A Good Samaritan.

Fendrick had guessed the exact truth. After leaving him Kate had ridden forward to the canon and entered it. She did not mean to go much farther, but she took her time. More than once she slipped from under a fold of her waist a letter and re-read sentences of it. Whenever she did this her eyes smiled. For it was a love letter from Curly, the first she had ever had. It had been lying on the inner edge of the threshold of her bedroom door that morning when she got up, and she knew that her lover had risen early to put it there unnoticed.

Faintly there came to her a wind-swept sound. She pulled up and waited, but no repetition of it reached her ears. But before her pony had moved a dozen steps she stopped him again. This time she was almost sure of a far cry, and after it the bark of a revolver.

With the touch of a rein she guided her horse toward the sound. It might mean nothing. On the other hand it might be a call for help. Her shout brought an answer which guided her to the edge of a prospect hole. In the darkness she made out an indistinct figure.

"Water," a husky voice demanded.

She got her canteen from the saddle and dropped it to him. The man glued his lips to the mouth as if he could never get enough.

"For God's sake get me out of here," he pleaded piteously.

"How long have you been there?"

"Two days. I fell in at night whilst I was cutting across country."

Kate fastened her rope to the horn of the saddle, tightened the cinch carefully, and dropped the other end to him. She swung to the back of the horse and braced herself by resting her full weight on the farther stirrup.

"Now," she told him.

The imprisoned man was dragged over the edge with one cheek scratched and bleeding.

"Might a-known you'd hurt me if you moved so fast," he complained, nursing his wounded face in such a way as to hide it.

"I'm sorry. I did my best to go carefully," the girl answered, stepping forward.

His hand shot forward and caught her wrist. Her startled eyes flashed to his face. The man was the convict Blackwell.

"Got anything to eat with you. I'm starving," he snapped.

"Yes. I shot some quail. Let go my hand."

He laughed evilly, without mirth. "Don't try any of your sassy ways on me. I'm a wolf on the howl."

She fought and twisted till she was worn out in her efforts to free herself. Panting, she faced him.

"Let me go, I tell you."

For answer his open hand struck her mouth. "Not till you learn your boss. Before I'm through with you a squaw won't be half so tame as you."

He dragged her to the horse, took from its case the rifle that hung by the saddle, and flung her from him roughly. Then he pulled himself to the saddle.

"March ahead of me," he ordered.

As soon as they had reached the bed of the canon he called a halt and bade her light a fire and cook him the quail. She gathered ironwood and cat-claw while he watched her vigilantly. Together they roasted the birds by holding them over the fire with sharpened sticks thrust through the wings. He devoured them with the voracity of a wild beast.

Hitherto his mind had been busy with the immediate present, but now his furtive shifting gaze rested on her more thoughtfully. He dared not leave her in the prospect hole. He was not yet ready to do murder, for fear of punishment. That was a possibility to be considered only if he should be hard pressed. The only alternative left him was to take her to the border as a companion of his fugitive doublings.

"We'll be going now," he announced, after he had eaten.

"Going where? Don't you see I'll be a drag to you? Take my horse and go. You'll get along faster."

"Do you think so?"

For the first time it came to her that if he did not take her with him he would kill her to insure his own safety. None of the arguments that would have availed with another man were of any weight here. Her sex, her youth, the service she had done him—these would not count a straw. He was lost to all the instincts of honor that govern even hard desperate men of his class.

They struck into the mountains, following a cattle trail that wound upward with devious twists. The man rode, and the girl walked in front with the elastic lightness, the unconscious flexuous grace of poise given her body by an outdoor life. By dusk they were up in the headwaters of the creeks. The resilient muscles of the girl had lost their spring. She moved wearily, her feet dragging heavily so that sometimes she staggered when the ground was rough. Not once had the man offered her the horse. He meant to be fresh, ready for any emergency that might come. Moreover, it pleased his small soul to see the daughter of Luck Cullison fagged and exhausted but still answering the spur of his urge.

The moon was up before they came upon a tent shining in the cold silvery light. Beside it was a sheetiron stove, a box, the ashes of a camp fire, and a side of bacon hanging from the limb

ASTHMA WOULDN'T LET HIM LIE DOWN

Hasn't had a sign of trouble now for over 9 months.

"A year ago I had asthma so bad my friends thought I wouldn't ever get over it. I had doctored for a long time without result. I had not been in bed for 3 weeks, could not even lie straight in a chair. Then I tried Milks Emulsion and for a long time it was only two days later that I could go to bed and sleep soundly. After taking eight bottles I considered myself completely cured. It is over 9 months now since I quit taking Milks Emulsion and I haven't had a symptom of asthma since."—Geo. W. Fisher, R. F. D. 1, Littrole, Pa.

Why shouldn't Milks Emulsion help you? It has worked wonders for others. It costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to those whom sickness has weakened and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting disease. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. of a stunted pine. Cautiously they stole forward.

He stopped. For the fire he crested. No doubt its owner, a Mexican sheep herder in the employ of Fendrick and Dominguez, was out somewhere with his flock.

Kate cooked a meal and the convict ate. The girl was too tired and anxious to eat. He fed but he made her eat a little. They packed the saddlebags with bacon, beans, coffee and flour. Blackwell tightened again the cinches and once more the two took the trail.

They made camp in a pocket open on a ridge high up on the hill. With a rope he fastened her hand to hand and tied the other end to the trunk of a fallen tree. To make sure of her he lay on the rope, both hands clenched to the rope. In five minutes he was asleep. But it was long before Kate could escape from wakefulness. At last she fell into troubled dreams.

From one of these she awoke to see that the crimson light was sifting through the barkness. She was shivering with the chill of an Arizona mountain night. Turning her body, the girl's eyes fell upon her captor. He was looking at her in the way that no decent man looked at a woman. Her impulse was to scream, to struggle to her feet and run. What did he mean? What was he going to do?

But something warned her this would precipitate the danger. She called upon her courage and tried to still the fearful tumult in her heart. Somehow she succeeded. A scornful, confident pride flashed from her eyes into his. It told him that for his life he dared not lay a finger upon her in the way of harm. And he knew it was true. Knew that if he gave way to his desire no hole under heaven would be deep enough to hide him from the vengeance of her friends.

He got sullenly to his feet. "Come. We'll be going."

Within the hour they saw some of his hunters. A wisp of smoke rose from the basin below. Grouped about it were three men eating breakfast.

"Don't make a sound," warned Blackwell.

His rifle covered her. With all her soul she longed to cry for help. But she dared not take the risk. Even as the two on the edge of the bowl watched, from right one of the campers rose and sauntered to a little grove where the ponies were tethered. The distance was too far to make sure, but something in the gait made the girl sure that the man was Curly. Her heart went out to him in a passion of appeal.

She was right. It was Curly. He was thinking of her at that moment. It spurred him, but no hint of warning...

told her that he was wondering whether he would have a better chance if he sacrificed her life.

From gulch to arroyo, from rock cover to pineclad hillside he was driven in his attempts to break the narrowing circle of grim hunters that hemmed him. And with each failure, with every passing hour, the terror in him mounted. He would have welcomed life imprisonment, would have sold the last vestige of manhood to save the worthless life that would soon be snuffed out unless he could evade his hunters till night and in the darkness break through the line.

He knew now that it had been a fatal mistake to bring the girl with him. He might have evaded Bolt's posses, but now every man within fifty miles was on the lookout for him. His rage turned against Kate because of it. Yet even in those black outbursts he felt that he must cling to her as his only hope of saving himself. He had made another mistake in lighting a camp fire during the morning. Any fool ought to have known that the smoke would draw his hunters as the smell of carrion does a buzzard.

Now he made a third error. Doubling back over an open stretch of hillside he was seen again and forced into the first pocket that opened. It proved to be a blind gulch, one offering no exit at the upper end but a stiff rock climb to a bluff above.

He whipped off his coat and gave it to Kate.

"Put it on. Quick!"

Surprised, she slipped it on.

"Now ride back out and cut along the edge of the hill. You've got time to make it all right before they close in if you travel fast. Stop once, just once, and I'll drop you in your tracks. Now git!"

She saw his object in a flash. Wearing his gray felt hat and his coat the pursuers would mistake her for him. They would follow her, perhaps shoot her down. Anyhow it would be a diversion to draw them from him. Meanwhile he would climb the cliff and slip away unnoticed.

The danger of what she had to do stood out quite clearly, but as a chance to get away from him he welcomed it gladly. From the lip of the gulch she swung abruptly to the right. Her horse stumbled and went down just as a bullet flew over her head. Before she was free of the stirrups strong hands pinned her shoulders to the ground. She heard a glad, startled cry. The rough hands became immediately gentle. Then things grew black. The last she remembered was that the mountains were dancing up and down in an odd fashion.

Her eyes opened to see Curly. She was in his arms and his face was broken with emotion of love and tenderness.

"You're not hurt?" he implored.

"No."

"He didn't mistreat you?" His voice was trembling as he whispered it.

"No, no."

And at that she broke down. A deep sob shook her body and mother. She buried her head on his shoulder and wept.

* * * * * * *

Without losing an instant the convict let himself at the climb. His feet... the swift glances shot behind him, the appalling dread that made his nerves ragged, delayed his speed by dissipating the singleness of his energy. His face and hands were torn with briars, his knee bruised by a slip against a sharp jut of quartz.

When he reached the top he was panting and shaken. Before he had moved a dozen steps a man came out of the brush scarcely six paces away and called to him to surrender. He flung his rifle to place and fired twice.

The man staggered and steadied himself. A shell had jammed and Blackwell could not throw it out. He turned to run as the other fired. But he was too late. He stumbled, tripped and went down full length.

The man that had shot him waited for him to rise. The convict did not move. Cautiously the wounded hunter came forward, his eyes never lifting from the inert sprawling figure. Even now he half expected him to spring up, life and energy in every tense muscle. Not till he stood over him till he saw the carelessly flung limbs, the amount twist to the neck could he believe that so slight a crook of the finger had sent swift death across the plateau.

The wounded man felt suddenly sick. Leaning against a rock he steadied himself till the nausea was past. Voices called to him from the place below. He answered and presently circled down into the gulch which led to the open.

At the gulch mouth he came on a little group of people. One glance told him all he needed to know. Kate Cullison was crying in the arms of Curly Flandrau. Simultaneously a man galloped up, flung himself from his horse and took the young woman from her lover.

"My little girl!" he cried in a voice that rang with love.

Luck had found his ewe lamb that was lost.

It was Curly who first saw the man approaching from the gulch. "Hello, Cass! Did you get him?"

Fendrick nodded wearily. "Yes. He's up there." The sheepman's hand swept toward the bluff.

"You're wounded?"

"Got me in the shoulder. Nothing serious, I judge."

Cullison swung around. "Sure about that, Cass?" It was the first time for years that he had called the other by his first name except in irony.

"Sure."

"Let's have a look at the shoulder."

After he had done what he could for it Luck spoke bluffly. "This dashed feud is off, Cass. You've wiped the slate clean. When you killed Black-

He Turned to Run as the Other Fired

well you put me out of a hostile camp."

"I'm glad, so glad. Now we'll all be friends, won't we?" Kate cried.

Cass looked at her and at Curly, both of them radiant with happiness, and his heart ached for what he had missed. But he smiled now. "The friends of mine if it does you."

He gave one hand to Luck and the other to his daughter.

Curly laughed gayly. "Everybody satisfied," I reckon.

CHAPTER XIII

Loose Threads

Those who knew about Sam's share in the planning of the Tin Cup hold up kept their mouths close. All of the men implicated in the robbery were dead except Dutch. Cullison used his influence to get the man a light sentence, for he knew that he was not a criminal at heart. In return Dutch went down the line without so much as breathing Sam's name.

Luck saw to it that Curly got all the credit of frustrating the outlaws in their attempt on the Flyer and of capturing them afterward. In the story of the rescue of Kate he played up Flandrau's part in the pursuit at the expense of the other riders. For September was at hand and the young man needed all the prestige he could get. The district attorney had no choice but to go on with the case of the State versus Flandrau on a charge of rustling horses from the Bar Double M. But public sentiment was almost a unit in favor of the defendant.

The evidence of the prosecution was not so strong as it had been. All of his accomplices were dead and one of the men implicated had given it out in his last moment that the young man was not a party to the crime. The man who had owned the feed corral had sold out and gone to Colorado. The hotel clerk would not swear positively that the prisoner was the man he had seen with the other in there.

Curly had one important asset no jury could forget. It counted for a good deal that Alec Flandrau, Billy Mackenzie and Luck Cullison were known to be backing him, but it was worth much more that his wife of a week sat beside him in the courtroom. Every look and motion of the girl wife radiated love for the young scamp who had won her. And since they were tender hearted all frontier men they did not intend to spoil her joy. Moreover society could afford to take chances with this young fellow. The draw. Long before they left the box each member of the jury knew that he was going to vote for acquittal.

It took the jury only one ballot to find a verdict of not guilty. The judge did not attempt to stop the uproar of glad cheers that shook the building when the decision was read. He knew it was not the prisoner so much they were cheering as the brave girl who had sat so pluckily for three days beside the husband she had made a man.

From the courtroom Curly walked out under the blue sky of Arizona a free man. But he knew that the best of his good fortune was that he did not go alone. For all the rest of their lives her firm little steps would move beside him to keep him true and steady. He could not go wrong now for he was anchored to a responsibility that was a continual joy and wonder to him.

Extempore Addresses

"I count myself fortunate," said a minister, "in numbering among my parishioners several who invariably tell me the truth about myself. Of a certain worthy but uneducated woman of my flock I asked whether she preferred my written or my unwritten sermons. She reflected for a moment and then replied, 'I like you best with out the book, because you keep saying the same thing over and over, and that helps me to remember.'"

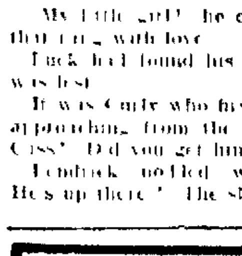

"March Ahead of Me," He Ordered

rang within to tell him he was so rent and in such fearful need of him.

Twice during the morning did the refugee attempt to slip down into the parched desert that stretched toward Sonora and safety. But the cordon set about him was drawn too close. Each time a loose seated rider lounging in the saddle with a rifle in his hands drove them back. The second attempt was almost disastrous, for the convict was seen. The hum of a bullet whistled past his ears as he and his prisoner drew back into the chaparral and from thence won back to cover.

Kate, drooping with fatigue, saw that he was desperate. He was trapped and he knew that by the Arizona code his life was forfeit and would be exacted of him should he be taken. He had not the hardihood to game it out in silence, but whined complaints, promises, and threats. He tried to curry favor with her, to work upon her pity, even while his furtive glances...

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How To Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few moments. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache, no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed up and miserable.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Buy Now While Deliveries Are Possible

Buy your Ford car now while deliveries are possible. There is only a limited, specified number of Ford cars allotted to this territory. You will be wise to buy one now while we can get cars to deliver. A signed order with us is your protection.

Even our small allotment of Ford cars is not shipped us until we have bonafide orders for them. This is because the demand for Ford cars all over the country is greater than the supply or production. So don't depend on spring delivery.

Only so many Ford cars will be shipped in to this territory; only so many will be able to get Ford cars. If you would be forehanded and plan ahead, you will have us deliver you a Ford car as soon as possible. Then you will have it to use whenever you want it.

The Ford is an all year utility—in your home or business. Its serviceability, its ease of operation, its low cost of maintenance has made it such. It will serve you the year around. Spring and summer, autumn and winter, it is your servant; always ready to do your bidding.

Less Coal-More Heat

You can save from a third to a half of your fuel and have a much warmer home than ever before if you will install a CALORIC.

The CALORIC is the remarkable furnace that heats without pipes, through only one register. It circulates heat by Nature's own method, forcing warm air up into the entire house and drawing cool air down into the furnace to be reheated and purified.

CALORIC FURNACE

The Original Patented Pipeless Furnace

The CALORIC heats practically all types of homes, bungalow or three-story house, up to eighteen rooms. It keeps kitchens and back bedrooms just as comfortable and warm as the rest of the house. Also heats churches, factories, stores and other business buildings. More than 50,000 already installed.

The CALORIC can be installed in new or old houses—no cutting of walls for pipes and no interference with present system of heating. It burns coal, coke, gas, wood or lignite, and saves from one-third to one-half the fuel.

WIFE OFFERS HOME TO SWEETHEART OF DOUGHBOY HUSBAND

NEW YORK, Jan. 31—A love story, the aftermath of the war, exceeding in its fanatic situation the imagination of the most daring fiction writer, has been revealed thru the efforts to procede to this country of Miss Emily Nowles, a young English girl and her three months' old baby.

Miss Nowles and her child have come here at the invitation of Mrs. Cora M. Spiker, of Baltimore, wife of the girl's sweetheart. Mrs. Spiker in an affidavit declared her willingness to take into her home the girl and the baby who have been detained at Ellis Island since January 15. She is leading the legal fight to gain them admittance to this country. Perley R. Spiker, the husband-sweetheart and former aviator in the American Expeditionary Force wishes to adopt the child. His brother, Guy S. Spiker, wishes to marry Miss Nowles although he has never seen her. Miss Nowles and baby, through money furnished by Mrs. Spiker arrived here on the Lapland.

"I have been informed of all of the conditions of my husband's friendship with Miss Nowles while he was in an aviation training camp in England in 1918," Mrs. Spiker said in her affidavit. "It will not disturb the happiness of my husband or myself if Miss Nowles comes to reside in our home."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D. D., Teacher of English Bible in the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

LESSON FOR FEBRUARY 1

PETER AND JOHN IN SAMARIA.

(May be used with missionary applications.)

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:4-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth.—Acts 1:8.

ADDITIONAL MATERIAL—II Kings 17:24-33; Luke 10:33-35; John 4:1-42.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Telling Others About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter and John in a Strange City.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Three Missionaries and Their Triumphs.

I. Preaching the Word Everywhere (v. 4).

After the stoning of Stephen the enemies of the Lord were more active than ever in their efforts to stamp out the new faith. With Saul as their leader they rushed back to the city, dragged from their homes and imprisoned those who confessed Christ. In this the devil overreached himself, for the believers took flight and went everywhere preaching the word. The time had come for the witness-bearing to extend beyond Jerusalem and Judea. Preaching was not confined to the twelve. The Lord thus makes the devil's wickedness to further his own purpose. Frequently, in the hour of trial, Christians see more clearly their duty and bestir themselves to perform it. If Christians will not move on, the Lord will shove them on.

II. Philip Preaching the Gospel in Samaria. (vv. 5-13).

Hitherto the gospel had reached only Jews; now its scope broadens and a Jew is preaching to Samaritans, and Samaritans are rejoicing in the gospel of Christ proclaimed by a Jew. His preaching was fruitful for multitudes believed his message. Much joy in this Samaritan city followed the reception of the message. Both Samaritans and Jews were looking for Christ, so they were glad to know that the Christ had come. Christ is the one name and person who will break down race prejudice. In him there is unity and real brotherhood, for he is the universal man. The only hope of the world is Christ.

So great was Philip's success that Simon Magnus professed faith and was baptized. Simon was a sorcerer who by magical devices had made a great reputation, gaining control of many of the credulous and ignorant, so that they regarded him as some great one from God (v. 10). The people turned from this sorcerer to the gospel of Christ.

III. Peter and John Sent to Samaria (vv. 14-17).

The church at Jerusalem sent two of its best men to encourage the work. They discerned that the Spirit had not yet fallen upon the believers, so they laid hands upon them and the Spirit was given unto them. These Samaritans were really converted, regenerated, but had not yet been filled with the Spirit's gift. Believers should seek the Spirit's gift at once, for this will exclude the interests of the world. The mission of Peter and John shows the unity of the church—the mother church gave sanction to the new work in Samaria. Much of the work of the modern evangelist is a failure because it is not properly followed up by those who will instruct and bring the converts into relationship with the living church.

IV. Simon's Wicked Request (vv. 18-24).

When Simon saw that the power of Peter exceeded that which he possessed and that it was received through the laying on of hands, he offered money for the gift. This act reveals the hypocrisy of this man. He professed faith and was baptized, following after them for a selfish end. To desire and seek the gift of the Spirit for selfish aggrandizement is to be guilty of Simon's sin. All traffic in sacred things has been called "Simony," from the name of this sorcerer. Peter told Simon that he had neither part nor lot in this matter, that he should repent of his wickedness and pray to God for forgiveness. He requested Peter to pray for him.

Simon practiced the art of sorcery for gain and influence. Now that he found his profits diminishing and his influence waning, he endeavored to acquire new power. All persons who use their religion to further their ambitions to get gain are guilty of this sin. Sometimes men join the church for business, social, and political reasons; sometimes official positions are covered for the prestige and power they give. Let all who are using the name of the church for business purposes be warned by Peter's rebuke! Let Simon's doom be a solemn warning to all!

The Goal.

The goal on which our eyes must be set is a church that will, in its own corporate life, consciously express the Christian ideal of fellowship and brotherhood, and at the same time strive persistently to mold national, industrial and social life in accordance with the principles which are the fountain light of all its days.

Delight in God's Work.

All great art is the expression of man's delight in God's work, not in his own.—Ruskin.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or other skin eruption, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphate and hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

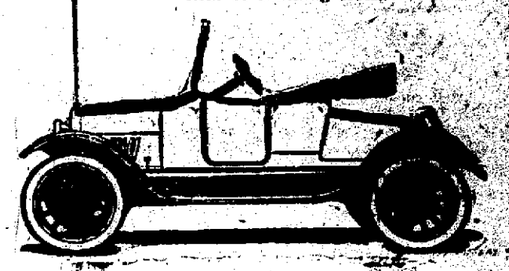

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should first try this for a week and notice results.

PROBLEMS FACING STRICKEN WORLD

Shall Chaos or Reconstruction in Europe Follow the Great World War?

CHANGE OF SOME SORT SURE

Returning Soldier Feels He Has at Least Earned a Better Chance Than He Has Hitherto Been Granted.

Article III.

By FRANK COMERFORD.

Europe wears an anxious look. One thought is arousing her from the stupor of her misery. She opens her eyes in wide amazement when she notices and notes the striking change that has come over her children. It is puzzling her, although she well knows what they have gone through, how patiently and uncomplainingly they suffered. It isn't strange to her that they have changed, when she remembers the peace of the years before the war, the quiet, sane lives they lived, and the four years in which they lived in wet, foul sewers called trenches, slept in holes on the edge of a strip of hell called No Man's Land, breathed the smell of burning flesh, saw their pals "go west," buried their dead, grinned at pain, laughed at death. Nerves of steel could not stand what they have gone through without being changed by it.

They have put on mufti again. It is strange to them. The quiet streets are dull. The demobilized soldier feels the letdown. The tenseness over depression sets in. During the war he didn't have time to think of anything except the job ahead of him. Every minute, every move was life or death to him. Now he realizes for the first time what he has gone through, wonders why he is alive. Two thoughts possess his mind: one the memory of every minute of the days and nights of the war—the other, of what is ahead of him, what is he going to do with his life! He is at a strange crossroads. The word "job" doesn't mean much to him. It isn't that he is lazy. He has to pinch himself to realize that it is over and that he is back from the war.

Earned Right to Better Place.

Between the whizz of machine bullets and the shriek of shrapnel he spent his time thinking, and his thoughts were not all about the war. He never got used to the war, but he learned to forget it. He has brought more than souvenirs and memories from his experience. He has brought home thoughts, ideas and ambitions from the trenches. Many a night, looking over No Man's Land, listening to the "banshee" of the war, he thought and resolved that if he ever came back he wanted, and would have, a better chance in this queer thing called Life. He feels that he has paid for a place, and he has paid. He has earned the right to a decent place in the world, for which he fought. He helped save the world and he looks to that world to save him from a meaningless machine existence. If it doesn't he has made up his mind to use force. He is willing to work, wants to work, but he insists on being part of his work, rather than his work being all of him. He sees, feels and measures things from an intensely human angle. He feels his humanness. The war emphasized the value and meaning of the human being. It was life or death. He is alive. He wants a human interest in his work.

Hundreds of demobilized soldiers in different parts of Europe, in different words, in different languages, have said to me: "If the world isn't going to give us a better chance than it gave us before the war, then the world wasn't worth fighting for. When we fought, they told us it was to make the world safe for democracy and to make life worth while. We thought this meant us and ours. We have learned that life isn't only a question of a job and enough to eat, we want to be treated like human beings. A man wants to feel that his work means more to him than just wages. He spends most of his time at work, the rest of it is spent with his family and in sleeping so he will be able to work the next day. Why shouldn't he have an interest in the business, and why shouldn't the business have an interest in him? We don't want to run the business, all we ask is a say in it, a friendly say in it. Some people think that to be fed is to be free—it isn't. Being free means being treated like a human being."

I have found many good honest men and women who have lost interest in work. They say, "We don't get a fair share of what we make. We fight among ourselves for jobs because we have to or starve, and they pay us as little as they can." I am not reasoning or arguing this question. I am stating a fact which indicates the state of mind of millions of men and women in Europe who did their bit for civilization during the past four years.

Fair Hearing Must Be Granted.

Calling these people bolshevists doesn't silence them nor solve the problem. Such tactics irritate and deepen the unrest. Their grievance must be given a fair, patient hearing. Their attitude of mind must be reckoned with if we hope to get back to normal living. I have heard some say that these people must be given to understand that they must work or starve. No law or government in the world is powerful enough to compel people to work. This is particularly true of the people today. To think of using force is foolish, suicidal.

We have had enough of force during the last four years and the farther we get away from the idea of beating one another into submission the better off we all shall be. The present unrest is positively dangerous. It isn't like any unrest we have ever had before. It is the restlessness of human beings who have been face to face with death. We need a lot of calmness and common sense. By kindly conference we must try to understand each other, and by just compromise help each other. Of one thing I am sure, and that is, if an effort is made to use blind, brute force on the working people of the world, the present unrest will be set in motion, a whirlwind will break upon the world.

The plain, open road back to happiness is co-operation. If we stop for a moment and realize what we have been through, and the changes that have come upon us while we were going through it, we will find getting together easy. Unrest blocks the road. It fetters the will to work. We must face the truth, and the sooner we do, the better. The world is broke. The war has bankrupted Europe. One thing, and one thing only, will bring us back to sane, normal living. It is work. Sympathy and understanding will do more to secure peace, stimulate work, than defiance, challenge and threats.

A normal world is one in which men live and work together in peace, where all men have a chance to be happy. This means an interest in work, a joy in working—living to work, rather than working to live. Men must have food, clean wholesome food, and enough of it to do their work without exhaustion. Men must have clothes. Not only the quantity and quality necessary to protect their bodies from the weather, but clothes that satisfy the normal instinct for appearing clean and neat. Decent clothes sustain self-respect. Men without them are less normal and moral.

All Need a Playtime.

There must be a time between the end of the day and the beginning of sleep in which men can know and enjoy their families. The man who is so used up by his day's work that he falls asleep at his supper table isn't playing fair with his wife and children, and his employer isn't playing fair with him. All men are boys, even after they have gray hair. This quality is probably the finest and best in them. They need a playtime, a recreation time. They lose something and the world loses more when they do not get it. It is not enough that bodies are fed, minds must not be starved. Light is the right of every human being with eyes. Education is light. The human race must have light. None of us were intended to live in darkness. Children are entitled to a school time, a jump-the-rope time, a top time, a play time. A child who enters manhood or womanhood without ever having known a childhood goes through life with something missing, something lost. The creed of the changed world is that while the world doesn't owe anyone a living, it is obligated to give every human being a chance to make a decent living. The new commandment is that this chance must be given.

I found these thoughts planted in the unrest in Europe. They are strongly, deeply rooted in the consciousness of the people. They are growing. Men and women are gardening, cultivating, protecting these ideas. Any effort to uproot or destroy these flowering thoughts will be resented and fought by the gardeners. They are not weed thoughts—they are the blooms of hope and they belong to the poor. They will fight and die before they will see these hope growths trampled under foot. This is the only garden they have. The blood of the dead fertilized it. The living care for it.

OHIO SPORTS JOIN CLEARFIELD MEN IN HUNTING CAMP

Allen W. McCoy, a contractor and real estate dealer of Akron, Ohio, is in Clearfield in the interest of a bunch of Akron live wire business men who have joined the Penna & Ohio Rod and Gun Club, which organization is closing a deal with the Whitmer-Steele Company for two tracts of mountain land adjoining View Point and the Joseph Shaw estate lands on Lick Run. The new organization, which will embrace the Tar Kiln Hunting club, composed principally of Clearfield sportsmen are arranging to incorporate their organization and will erect a new club house and make other improvements on their 2000 acres tract.

The Penna. & Ohio Club lands adjoin the State game reserve and are very desirable. They also join the Goshen Gun Club preserve on the north.

Mr. McCoy has been coming to Clearfield the past several seasons and possesses a whole host of warm friends here, who are not only glad to meet him but glad to know that he and his Ohio friends are going to be permanently interested here.

Mr. McCoy during his stay will also look at several small timber tracts for sale in this section, with the idea of securing rough lumber for his future building operations in the hustling "rubber city."

The Club has elected the following officers:

President, W. R. Fargo, of Clearfield.

Vice President, C. W. Patton, of Akron, Ohio.

Secretary, Allen R. McCoy, of Akron, Ohio

Ass't. Secretary, C. J. Young, Clearfield.

Treasurer, S. I. Sankey, Clearfield.

Board of Directors, M. M. Condon, W. Blair Fargo, of Clearfield; T. C. Conners, Frank E. McCoy and B. F. Sparr, of Akron, Ohio.

CLEARFIELD BOY IN LUCK

Clearfield people generally will be interested in the following taken from today's Philadelphia Public Ledger.

It became known yesterday in independent circles that Richard Weglein, president of City Council, would announce the name of his new clerk as soon as council authorizes creation of the position.

According to independent leaders the new clerk will be Frank W. Short, political writer for the Philadelphia Record, a resident of the Thirty-third ward. The finance committee approved the creation of the clerkship Thursday after a vigorous battle from the Vare minority, led by Joseph P. Gaffney, who was chairman of the old councilmanic finance committee. Mr. Gaffney characterized the position as "useless" and said the clerk would be simply "a valet to the president." The matter will be reported for final action at the next meeting of Council.

Teh salary of the new clerk would be $3500.

The fortunate young man is the son of United States Marshal and Mrs. John F. Short and a former Clearfield boy who has certainly made good since taking up newspaper work in Philadelphia.

[illegible] TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

[illegible] Grandmother's recipe to bring [illegible], lustre and youthfulness to hair when faded, streaked or gray

That beautiful, even shade of dark, [illegible] hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It [illegible] or mars the face. When it [illegible], turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old [illegible] improved by the addition of [illegible] ingredients at a small cost all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance.

ALLEN M. E. CHURCH BUYS A PARSONAGE

The congregation of the Allen A. M. E. church has been greatly handicapped in its efforts for good among the colored people of this community because of lack of a parsonage in which to house their pastor. Recognizing this great need and in the hope of remedying the condition a congregational meeting was held recently at which the pastor, Rev. John W. Dixon presided, when it was decided to erect a parsonage on the rear of their church lot, corner New and Merrill streets. The plan decided upon called for a dwelling to cost $2700 and the members of the congregation present delighted themselves to contribute in from $5.00 to $25.00 subscriptions the sum of $300 by February 22nd, with a similar amount by April 18th.

Since that arrangement the church committee found it possible to purchas the double house at No. 116 Merrill street for $2200, with possession given April 1st, and decided to make that deal instead of building a new structure.

The membership of the Allen church is small and the means of the members are more or less limited therefore it has been decided to ask the good people of Clearfield to assist this struggling congregation to solve their difficulty and become a better force for good in the community by reason thereof and a plea is hereby made for general contributions to this worthy cause. Every other demonstration in Clearfield is provided with suitable and convenient church properties and we believe our charitable Christian people will respond to this appeal to their generosity and help our colored brethren attain the goal of their ambition.

Subscriptions in any amount will be thankfully received and may be paid to H. S. Whiteman, Jr., at the Clearfield National bank. Make all checks payable to the African M. E. church.

The following members of the congregation are authorized to solicit for the parsonage fund: Mason B. Russell, Emmit Burhannon, Luke Smith, W. P. Simpson, Sol Stone, Gus Mallary, Henry Wiggins, Mack McCoy, Deacon Williams and Mrs. Josephine Lane.

PROMINENT CURWENSVILLE CITIZEN DIES

Alex H. Irvin, one of Curwensville's best known citizens and business men died at his home in that place at 5:30 o'clock this morning after an illness extending over a period of several weeks, aged about 73 years.

The funeral will be from his late home Monday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock.

A Statement

Three months ago this Company organized an Employe's Co-operative Council as a means of forming a closer business relationship between employer and employe. This council also provided definite channels through which any and all grievances might be taken and adjusted through a commitete of three elected by the employes and a like committee selected by the management.

Friday evening, January 30th, at 7:30 p. m. the operators on the Clearfield exchange presented an impossible salary demand, with an ultimatum that if the same were not granted they would walk out at eight o'clock Saturday morning. The management pointed out the irregularity and impossibility of this procedure and requested that the matter be taken up in the regular way for adjustment.

The employes refused.

The management then requested an immediate audience with the employes affected for later in the evening. This was likewise refused or declared impossible to get some of the girls together.

A personal interview was then had with two of the operators on duty and an adjustment satisfactory to them as individuals was offered, but they refused to remain on duty unless all of the girls would agree to remain.

The demands made were as impossible as they were unfair, to both employes and employer, and the employes' refusal to consider a method of arbitration resulted in the walk-out this morning.

The action of employes was not only unfair to the company and to the public, but bordered very close to the dishonorable, in that they refused to permit the chief operator admission to the operating room and hid or destroyed rate and other records, property of the company, on the switchboard for their guidance.

In this emergency we appeal to the public and our patrons for their kindly consideration, and to former operators for assistance, temporarily at least.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts before Breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder is Troubling you

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, diziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon uice, combined withlithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot inure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure thereby avoiding serious kidney aomplications.
